The P. C. Editor Says:

The Red Cross committee is having a hard time securing donations of materials to prepare for bandages, and other things much needed in wars, catastrophes, etc., and are urging all who possible can to donate bleached muslin, beacon cloth, white tape ½ to ⅝ inches wide, pearl buttons ⅞ inches in diameter, white thread No. 60, knitting needles Nos. 1-2-3, wool yarn for sweaters and sox, sewing needles, straight pins, and the use of sewing machines. It is absolutely necessary that this list be contributed if the Sikeston Red Cross does its bit. Call either of the following committee and don't be backward in going forward with you contribution: Mrs. H. E. Reuber, Mrs. C. L. Blanton, Sr., Mrs. Earl Allen, Mrs. C. H. Denman.

You have got to hand the boquet to Milburn Arbaugh when it comes to doing things. He was selected as general manager of the Jubilee arrangements and up to Wednesday morning had sold 59 of the 60 booths in the big tent in Railroad Park. He has superintended the erection of all entertainment platforms and should be given a vote of thanks by the balance of the Jubilee committee for taking this responsibility off their shoulders.

It certainly pays to advertise. Last week we printed a paragraph about the so-called rye bread offered on the Sikeston markets and wished for a loaf of old-fashioned 100 per cent rye bread. In the mail Tuesday morning came a loaf of real rye bread from the Wagner bakery at Jackson, Mo. We don't know who sent it but it was just the thing for an old stomach for which we thank the sender. And in the afternoon mail another loaf of the real article made under the supervision of Mayor Smith of Kansas City in one of the bakeries that he owns in that city was received. We are now eating rye bread three times a day as long as it lasts. I'll say it pays to advertise.

County Collector, C. E. Felker, has given full notice to all delinquent on their taxes and if they haven't taken advantage of his notice they needn't be surprised to find their name printed in the delinquent tax notice and their property advertised for sale to cover the tax.

Miss Louise Longbottom was chosen queen of the harvest festival at Ellsinore, in Carter County. The queen's picture was very striking but she should have the bottom dropped from her name and she would still weigh just as much on the scales.

It will take more than a box of candy to square those Legionnaire boys with their wives who are pictured holding in their arms those big broads who show a lot that ought to be covered. They were having a great time while in Chicago but when they return home there will have to be a lot of explaining done.

Sikseton store windows are very attractively dressed for the Jubilee and will be long remembered by visitors. Many who see these windows will remember the wares shown and return some other day and shop at these stores. Women's wear are especially attractive and some of these evening dresses will undoubtedly be worn at the Queens Ball Saturday night. We'll be there to see them.

Governor Stark has accepted an invitation to be present at the Pemiscot County Fair at Caruthersville on the afternoon and evening of Thursday, October 5, arriving there about 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon. We have been advised that this day will be termed "Governor's Day" at the Fair.

The reason Smokey Sutton is stepping high, wide and handsome is because he is the Pappy of a boy baby born in a Cape Girardeau hospital Tuesday morning at 2:00 o'clock. Mother and babe doing nicely but Smokey is being watched by friends to see that no relapse occurs.

We are sorry at the loss of the big hay barn on the farm of X. Caverno, near Canalou the past week, that is supposed to have caught from negro children who were playing nearly probably with matches. As the old women said: "Them as has can lose while them as hasn't can't."

Gore, Sr., Now Faces Charge Of Murder

Dr. George W. Gore, Sr., whose son faces a murder charge at Benton, Ill., in the slaying of the physician's wife, finds himself accused of murder in the street shooting of Carl Choisser, Benton publisher and attorney for the younger Gore.

Choisser was fatally wounded Monday by a man that stepped from behind a telephone pole on the public square and fired three shots in his stomach.

The elder Gore claimed he shot the attorney, related to the Gores by marriage, in self-defense. Officers said the doctor had disagreed with Choisser over the handling of the case of George Gore, Jr., who must go to trial Oct. 16 for the shooting of his step-mother.

In an oral confession, since repudiated, the son said he killed second wife of his father and afterward spent the night at a Sikeston hotel.

NEW BOOKS FOR RENTAL LIBRARY

The following short sketches are thumbnail impressions of a number of new additions to the rental library.

"Watch for the Dawn", by Stuart Cloete. The plot is centered about the hopeless struggle of the free Boers against English domination in South Africa. Young Kasper van der Berg is a hunted man because he has killed an English soldier and has many thrilling adventures in his wild flight from the consequences.

"Children of God", by Vardis Fisher. This long novel history of the Mormans is crowded with action. Beginning in New York where young Joseph Smith was accepted as a prophet, it tells of the migration of the sect from Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and Missouri, and of its final settlement in Utah. The character of Brigham Young as portrayed by the author is unforgetable.

"The Arrogant History of White Ben", by Clemence Dane. The realistic story of a towering figure who leaves supremacy in an English upland to become a world dictator. The action takes place after a World War in the 1950's.

"Black Narcissus", by Rumer Godden. The Anglican sisters of St. Mary make a brave struggle to establish a mission and to carry on work successfully among the primitive hill people in Tibet. The various reactions of the sisters to the climate, isolation, and lack of conveniences make an interesting psychological study while the vivid descriptions of the Tibetan landscape lend glamor to the story.

"Breakneck Brook", by Margaret Flint. The story of a pretty girl who preferred like on a farm to college and a job in the city. The dignified and occasionally humorous narrative is set in the hills of Maine.

"Ararat", by Elgin Croseclose. This book will hold a special appeal to those who enjoyed Werfel's "Forty Days of Musa Dagh". Amos Lyle, Texas cowhand, turned missionary, devotes his life to the Armenians in Turkey and flees with them to Russia during the Turkish massacres in 1895. Failing in Russia to build a permanent Armenian settlement he decides to dedicate his life to helping destitute children.

First 1939 Price Adjustments Paid In Madrid County

The first 1939 price adjustment payments on cotton in New Madrid county were received Thursday of the past week and the first corn payments on Monday of this week, according to County Agent Broom. There were 336 checks were received for the total amount of $29,185.35. Corn payments, 138 checks, amounted to $3,393.27. Although this is only a small portion of the total, other checks should come in rather rapidly from now on, it is believed by Chairman Samuel L. Binford.

Also, he points out that this is the first time that payments have been received the same year in which they are due. This is due perhaps to several factors—more office space has been made available, a more efficient office force, better understanding of the program by the people themselves, and the program is being continued pretty well along the same generla lines.

So far there have been no material changes made in the 1940 program; therefore, probably all payments will be received during the current year rather than being delayed as in the past. Probably one of the things which has contributed more is the understanding and cooperation of the people themselves, the county agent said.

'Big Time' Football Has an Evening on S. H. S. Field

Those extra-hardy football fans who follow the game even during week-day practice sessions rubbed their eyes and looked again after arriving at the Sikeston High School field Tuesday afternoon.

On the field was not only the Bulldogs but a gang of huskies in red, white and blue helmets that looked like they might be ready to go up against anything from a university on down.

They were big time—St. Mary's University of San Antonio, Tex., working out on the local field.

En route to play Xavier University at Cincinnati, O., Friday night, they ran into some unexpected difficulties when the gas line of their big bus broke 14 miles south of Sikeston. A wrecker towed the disabled carrier to this city, but it was found replacement part must be secured from Buffalo, N. Y. So in the meantime, under the guidance of Head Coach J. C. "Mose" Simms, Line Coach Jim Smith and Backfield Coach Doug Locke, the squad gave the crowd an extra dish of football-istics.

No slow-starters, these. Already they had played two games and won them both. Edward Collignon, chairman of the faculty committee on athletics, said the team defeated the University of San Francisco on the West Coast a week ago Sunday, 7-6, and last Friday ran through Daniel Baker College of Brownwood, Tex., a Texas Conference team, 27-0. After Xavier, the San Antonio team will swing around to take on the University of Toledo.

The squad of 29 and remainder of the party left their school Sunday afternoon. After a workout Monday at North Little Rock, Ark., they intended to scrimmage Tuesday evening against the Cape Teachers, but the bus had other plans.

The group had expected to arrive in Cincinnati Wednesday evening, the same time they left here after chartering a Greyhound bus. A man was left behind to bring the school's bus to Cincinnati when it is fixed.

Stallings appointed a commitee of three to make plans for financing the senior trip. H. L. Sizemore, Nana Lou Marshall, and Eleanor Righter comprise this committee.

The Senior Class met Tuesday afternoon and selected their rings from four samples taken from Sikeston jewelry stores. The ring chosen is of a standard design, showing the Sikeston Bulldog.

Miss Erley, Miss Burch, and Mr. Nothdruft are in charge of the decorating and arranging of the school exhibit.

FACULTY MEMBERS AT FORNFELT MEETING

Eight members of the faculty of Sikeston High School attended a Scott-Mississippi County Teacher's Association meeting at Fornfelt, Monday evening, Sept. 25. After the meeting, which was held in the basement of the Methodist Church, supper was served to the members by the ladies of the church.

Dean Vest C. Meyers of the Southeast Missouri Teacher's College was the speaker of the evening. The meeting was held for the purpose of forming a community teacher's association. Since Sikeston has enough teachers to form a community association within itself, she did not enter this association.

There will be a community association in Scott County, one in Sikeston and another made up of al lother schools in Scott County.

Mrs. Davis' second graders have been studying the different ways of traveling. One of the results is several pasteooard airplanes, trains, boats, autos and busses which were made by the class.

HEALTH INTERVIEWS

Mrs. Poe, the school nurse, with the aid of Mrs. S. Bloomfield, Mrs. D. Taylor, Mrs. W. P. Wilkerson and Mrs. Hirschberg, members of the P.-T. A., have been interviewing the mothers of the beginners for "health histories" this lat week and making arrangements for each to have a physical examination by their family physicians. Response has been very good. At the present time 50 per cent of the mothers have cooperated. A few of the children had already had the examination made before school started. Mrs. Poe wishes to call attention to the "Nine Point Health Program" and urges everyone to help in order to increase the list of nine-point pupils this year. Last year the school had 114 pupils who received the nine-point awards.

BOY MEETS DOG

A most happy reunion of boy and dog was witnessed Monday morning by the first grade children and their teacher, Miss Jewell Mouser, when J. F. Cox III was finally found by his devoted little bulldog. The dog had been searching frantically, from room to room, for his master and both he and J. F. were overjoyed to see each other. "Skippy" was allowed to visit in J. F.'s room and to participate in the football game at recess.

Enjoy an evening of fun and romance on the Excursion Steamer Capitol Saturday, Sept. 30. See ad in this issue.

Bulldogs to Open Against East Prairie

Coach Vernon Green will take his string of Sikeston Bulldogs to East Prairie this Friday night for their opening fling against Coach Hugh May's boys.

Inexperienced for the most part and very light in spots, the Sikeston team is something of a question mark—much depends on capacity of the opposition. Should any casualties occur, Coach Green will be hard put to find replacements of the size and ability to fill in. The second string that has been scrimmaging against the first is very light indeed.

Little is known of the East Prairie team save that it dropped a game last Friday to Ste. Genevieve, 14-6. Hence, the Mississippi County team will be a game ahead of Sikeston in experience.

As East Prairie is in the South Division of the SEMO conference, it will be a non-conference game.

The opening kickoff is scheduled for 7:30 p. m.

SIKESTON LINEUP

The probable starting lineup of Sikeston is:

There will be a meeting on the Clarence Critchlow farm at Matthews Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 3, starting at 2:00 p. m., to view and discuss the results obtained from the hybrid corn experiments, according to County Agent Leslie Broom.

There are eighteen corns in this experiment; practically all of the hybrids, which have possibilities in New Madrid County will be found in this plot.

The corn will be shucked, weighed, and left at the ends of the rows so that everyone may have opportunity to observe the corn and stalks both. Also, information will be provided as to the stand, leaning stalks and ears per stalk.

TIN HORN SCRIBE IN MO. URGES BOSSES TO IGNORE WAGNER LABOR ACT

Sikeston, Mo.—A tin horn scribe in this town of 6,000 in Southeast Missouri aimed his little popgun at labor but missed and tore a hole in civil liberties. Writing in a recent issue of a local shee, the t. h. s. whined:

"Our merchants and other interested parties should keep their ears to the ground and eyes wide open to see that union organizers out of Cape Girardeau do not hold another meeting in Sikeston in a attempt to organize labor, mecanics and the unemployed . . ."

Following this the mutton head lost all control and advised local employers to bear down on labor and "persuade them to have nothing to do with the agitators."

Well! Well! The little man certainly shoved his neck out. Of course, it's a scrawny neck and hardly worth notice, but it might be well for the t. h. s. to study the case of Jersey City, N. J., in which a political giant, backed by municipal and state forces, offered similar advice and was clipped by the U. S. Supreme Court.

Employers in Siketon might also, and with profit, study the National Labor Relations Act which the tin horn scribe advises them to tear up.—Radio and Electric Union News, Washington, D. C.

4-H Clubs to Show Gilts At Jubilee

Members of two New Madrid County 4-H gilt clubs have expressed their intentions to exhibit their purebred gilts at the Southeast Missouri Jubilee being held in Sikeston the last of this week.

The Catron Gilt Club, under the leadership of Earl Allstun, will exhibit purebred spotted Poland China gilts, while the Fairview Club, led by Lenzie Beck, will show purebred Duroc Jersey gilts.

The club members' gilts are in good condition and should make an interesting and worthwhile showing, according to assistant county agent Wm. C. Roberson.

New Missouri Road Plan Drawn

Jefferson City, September 26.—A new road program—embodying a 3-cent gasoline tax which sponsors claimed would provide $10,000,000 a year for road improvements—was laid before the State Highway Commission today.

A committee, headed by Judge E. S. Bond, Jefferson City, president of the Missouri County Judges' Association, presented the plan. Gov. Lloyd C. Stark was to have participated in the conference, but was attending the American Legion convention in Chicago.

Three-cent gasoline tax proposals—a penny boost—were beaten at the polls last year and again in this year's session of the Legislature.

ON POPULATIONS BASIS

The constitutional amendment which today's group would submit to the voters next year calls for:

A 1-cent increase in the 2 cents a gallon gasoline tax.

An equal division of the extra cent's proceeds between counties and cities, with all cities above 500 sharing on a population basis. (No plan for county distribution yet perfected.)

Abolition of city gasoline levies.

County Courts to take over administration of supplementary or farm-to-market roads, with the State Highway Department to concentrate on the present system of primary and secondary highways with its 2-cent tax yield.

INDORSED BY M. F. A.

The plan wsa drawn up by a group organized at Columbia last July and already has been indorsed by the Missouri Farmers' Association, whose president, William Hirth of Columbia, was among the eight committee members conferring with the commission.

Judge Bond said the 1-cent tax increase would yield an additional $6,000,000 a year, of which $3,000,000 would go to cities and the other $3,000,000 to counties. Typical counties would receive $15,000 to $30,000 a year, he estimated.

The plan's allocations to cities, the committee argued, would more than compensate them for the loss of their own tax, while county construction of supplementary roads would be "more satisfactory" and economical.

CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE

Senator Vandenberg, campaigning on two fronts—one objective being the Republican Presidential nomination, the other a defense movement to hang onto his job in the Senate in the not improbable event of the first objective failing— chose the neutrality issue as the text of his major political speech so far.

There has been a general expression of desire and hope to have partisan politics adjourned so far as possible, while the administration and the country and the country generally are concerned with the effort to keep us out of war, but the Michigan senator doesn't think that way. He told the country in effect that the complications and perils begotten of the European war were unimportant compared with the necessity of electing a Republican administration next year.

Senator Vandenberg was one of the Republican members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee who prevented the revision of the present embargo law during the closing days of the recent session of Congress. Every Republican on that committee voted the same way, Senator Borah insisting that because of some inside information he had he knew that there was no European war imminent. The result was to leave this country, when the declarations of war came on, with our hands tied, despite the nation-wide sentiment that any bill that gave an advantage to the totalitarian combatants was anything but advantageous to the United States of America. Incidentally it involved the call of an extra session of Congress, with the expense that involves, which is peculiar, to say the least, for a group to do that is clamoring for national economy.

POLITICS IN FULL SWING

But for the solid Republican vote in the Committee, we could have returned to the normal and historical attitude of America in regard to foreign trade without any fuss, for all that was sought was to permit any nation in the world trading with us provided it paid cash for what it bought and carried its purchases home in its own ships and at its own risk. Now, of course, the cry will go up that by the cash-and-carry plan we will be discriminating against those belligerents who cannot pay for what we have to sell or haven't the ships to get them home if they could pay.

Even the New York Herald-Tribune—chief among the assailants of the Roosevelt administration—answers Senator Borah's declaration that repeal of the embargo "will inevitably bring us into war" in this wise: "It seems pertinent to insist that the United States need not 'inevitably' be 'brought' into anything." Further says this anti-administration newspaper: "It should, we think, be recognized that to the extent (and it would be a very small extent at present) that repeal of the embargo operates to end an advantage which we are now giving Herr Hitler and to afford a corresponding advantage to the Allies, it would tend to incite the Germans to attack our trade. It does not follow that the attack would be made, that they could be made in any serious way, or that this country would be under any compulsion to resist them by declaring war."

Actually the administration's neutrality program is not a political issue—except to the professional Republican politicians. Steady-thinking members of that party like Nicholas Murray Butler, and former Secretary of State Stimson have declared the embago repeal not only wise but necessary.

If we didn't have it the embargo would shoot our international trade to pieces—even in the case of Canada, our best customer.

MAKING A PRECEDENT

So far as I can recall there is no instance in history where a big nation slaughtered its own commerce because its markets were available to one combatant country and not to another. Indeed it is no secret that had the measure revising the embargo act been permitted to go before the full Senate we would have the benefit of it now. Smothering the proceeding in Committee, settled nothing beyond giving the Republican member of that body and a few anti-administration Democrats the satisfaction of deferring something the President asked for.

As this letter is being written the cry is going up that the administration is planning cloture to prevent a full and free debate of the problem. Nobody in the administration has been mentioned cloture; nobody has even suggested that any curb be placed on discussion in the Senate. If, instead of an honest debate, the situation might have developed into a mere filibuster to prevent the Senate taking action—that is something the Senate and only the Senate could or would handle.

Actually the isue is simple and should not take a great deal of time in its presentation. Senators like Vandenberg, Borah and Nye contend that to remove the embargo puts us in peril of war. Those who favor the removal of the embargo contend that the so-called enactment encouraged the gangster powers to begin the war, because of the advantage these powers received by our restriction of the democracies' ability to buy what they needed from America and that the continuance of the embargo would be hostile and harmful to those whose struggle has the sympathy or nearly all Americans.

You may be sure that there would be no lengthy debate, let alone any filibuster over it, were it not for the circumstance that there is a Presidential election next year, so that the minority party spokesmen or hopeful candidates think it is of value to them to balk and try to discredit the Democratic adminitration.

Incidentally, it is the opinion of this humble commentator on political events, that Senator Vandenberg's speceh will not help him either in his ambition to become the Republican forlorn hope, or make it easier for him to remain a senator.

Add to the following sauce: Melt 4 tablespoons butter, add 1 teaspoon minced onion, cook 1 minute and stir in 5 tablespoons flour. When mixed add 1 1/3 cups milk and stir constantly until very thick, smooth and boiling. Remove from the fire, add the meat and spread out on a platter to cool. When cold shape into croquettes—12 round or oblong ones. Beat 1 egg with 1 tablespoon cold water, dip each croquette in it and then roll in fine dry bread-crumbs. Let stand at least 15 minutes and then fry in deep fat heated to 375 degrees. Drain on soft paper and serve hot with parsley sauce or tomato sauce and broiled mushrooms.

DRIVER RESPONSIBILITY

The captain of a ship is responsible for the welfare and the safety of every person on board. In time of danger or stress all hands look to him for guidance; should an accident occur, the captain is the last man to crawl into a lifeboat.

An airplane pilot is held accountable for the lives of all his passengers; and because this responsibility is so tremendous he employs all known safety devices. He carefully checks all atmospheric conditions prevailing over his route; he sees to it that his radio apparatus is in good working order; he makes sure that his plane is mechanically perfect. Only after these precautionary measures are attended to will an airplane pilot leave the ground.

An engineer on a train must know every inch—every curve and every angle—of his route before he is entrusted with the lives of hundreds of passengers. When holding the throttle he scrupulously follows intricate schedules and signals.

When, despite all precautions, disastrous accidents do occur involving either a ship, an airplane or a train, investigation begins immediately. Company officials and government agents rush to the scene of the accident, check up all possible data, and determine precisely the cause and effect. Thereafter all human efforts are bent on preventing similar tragedies.

But what about the automobile and the accidents it causes?

Every twenty-four hours, on an average, over one hundred persons are killed in gruesome automobile wrecks! In a like period, more than four thousand persons are injured in the same way! Should accidents involving a train, ship or plane cause such large loss of life it would be spectacular news—a tragedy that would horrify the nation.

Yet there is no such overwhelming sentiment aroused relative to automobile accidents. Why not? The key to mass inertia regarding traffic accidents lies in the fact that the general public takes the attitude "accidents are bound to happen; there is not much we can do to prevent them." Once the public comes to the realization that accidents are caused and do not just happen, and once the blame is placed on the proper person—the driver—we will see less needless bloodshed!

A great many motorists assume little or no personal responsibility . These foolish persons regard the automobile as a toy, failing to realize that it is really a ton or more of treacherous steel, ready to crush and mangle and kill at the slightest provocation. These same persons take unbelievable risks without so much as the flicker of an eyelash. Passing cars on hills and curves, speeding seventy or eighty or ninety miles per hour, disregarding stop signs —all these vicious practices are daily occurrences.

If the curse of such conduct were only on the head of the guilty driver, accidents would not always be so sad. But, many times, it is the innocent little wife, or the unsuspecting passenger in the back seat or the small children, who pay in the driver's stead—which doesn't seem fair!

Believe it or not, it's really a privilege to drive a car, a privileged granted only to the last generation. Before the advent of the automobile our grandfathers and great-grandmothers had to travel by way of the inconvenient and slow-moving buggy, wagon or horse. They never dreamed that any conveyance as beautiful, as comfortable, or as swift as an automobile would come into existence. Really, the man who drives today is very fortunate, but he should remember that in equal proportion to his luck is his driving responsibility.

SIGNING IS NOT "JUST A FORMALITY"

Sometimes salesmen say that signing your name to a paper is "just a formality." Never be misled by such a statement—you may be signing a legally binding contract. For your own protection read what you are signing, refuse to sign unless the document is filled in according to the terms as you understand them, and keep a copy.

Remember, mortgages and notes are legal documents that can be acted upon with the aid of the courts. You cannot avoid the provision by stopping payments and letting the firms take back the goods. Firms may legally take back goods, sell them, and hold you responsible for the difference.

To be safe, insist that all agreements, guarantees, provisions for payments, etc., be in writing. Always follow the slogan—"Read Before You Sign," and "Keep a Copy".

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

The new 1940 automobiles have been provided with a complete new unit of lighting.

The new equipment is known as "The Sealed Beam Headlight System." No dirt, dust or moisture can penetrate the sealed unit to corrode the reflecting surfaces and lens. More light, properly distributed is thrown on the road surfaces.

The new lamps throw two light beams. The lower beam is for city driving and the top beam for country driving.

These light will provide more protection and greater safety after dark on the nation's streets and highways.

TO KEEP FISH WHITE

Boiled fish will stay white if a little lemon juice is added to the water in which it is cooked, and the acid also helps in keeping the fish from falling apart in cooking. Boil fish slowly and time it carefully so as not to overcoko it. Tie the fish in a piece of cheesecloth or a piece of clean muslin or place it in a steamer for cooking.

A Friend in the Kitchen

By Hermine Crawford

One and all, the most distinguished physicians and food experts agree that the green leafy vegetables form one of the most important of the food groups—so important that everybody ought to eat a good sized helping of them every day. "But what can a body do?" says the distracted housekeeper. "They just won't eat spinach."

There are two things you can do. One si to look around and find other greens beside spinach. There are more kinds of greens common in this country, but not commonly appreciated, than there are days in the week. To be able to enjoy them all would mean a greatly enriched dietary as well as more pleasure in eating.

The other thing htat you can do is to learn how to cook spinach along with all the other greens, by the new, shotr-time methods, so they will not only have a chewable quality that makes a pleasant mouthful, but will look good enough to eat and taste as good as they look. It's a shame that such valuable leaves as kale and cabbage are so often rejected as strong juiced, coarse, smelly foods. It was the old, long-time cookery that developed those rank flavors and reduced the curled leaves that went into the pot so crisp and green, to a dark pulp. Cooked the new way, these same leaves come to the table as a really decorative dish, and fresh and green, each with its own rich, yet delicate, flavor—and no offensive odors hovering over the household. I prefer the waterless methods for practically all vegetables. Not only are none of the valuable elements lost by the waterless method in the discarded water, but it seems to me that it gives a les swatery, fuller-flavored result.

Once the two quick cookery methods, as described for cabbage, are mastered, they can be used for practically all vegetables. But th etime required will vary according to the variety and tenderness of the vegetables.

WATERLESS METHOD FOR CABBAGE

Cut the stem down to the leaves and remove all decayed or unsightly parts of leaves. Let the cabbage stand in cold water for 15 minutes. Then rinse and drain. Cut into pieces about the size for slaw or a little larger. Transfer cabbage to a heavy utensil that has a tight fitting cover. Add one tablespoon of boiling water. Cover and cook until steam has begun to form and the cooking proces shas started. Now, turn the heat low enough to just keep the pot steaming. Continue cooking 10 minutes, more or less, according to tenderness of the cabbage and your own preference.

If much steam escapes, you may have to add another tablespoon of boiling water to prevent burning, but that will not be necessary if the utensil is tight.

Season with salt and butter and stir the cabbage about in the pot to gather up and blend in any liquid that may remain in the bottom. Then turn out everything in the pot and serve immediately. I sometimes cut fine a red sweet pepper or a canned pimento into the pot with the cabbage. It gives the dish a festive air and adds considerably to its nutritive value.

Clean, soak, rinse and drain as for waterless method. For the quick-boiling method, it is better to leave all vegetables in as large pieces as practicable in order to reduce to a minimum the loss of valuable elements from the cut surfaces into the water which is discarded. Have a large pot more than half full of rapidly boiling, salted water(enough water to more than cover the cabbage.) Plunge the cabbage into the water and boil rapidly. Then cover and adjust the heat to continue boiling. Very tender, young cabbage will be edibly tender in five minutes. An older, or tougher variety may take from 10 to 12 minutes.

When done, lift the cabbage from the water with a slit spoon and drain. Transfer to a hot vegetable dish, season with melted butter and serve.

The big, unbroken, bright green segments make an unusually inviting vegetable, one a good many people have actually never seen before.

For an unusual flavor, try cooking the leafy tops of celery in the pot with the cabbage.

Kale, if not too large, should be left in bunches to prevent loss from cut surfaces, and left immersed in cold water for 10 minutes. Then lift out of the water, rinse through several waters, until free of all sand. Shake free of most of the water and then strip the leaves from the spines. The leaves can then be cooked by either method.

Chard, prepare as directed for kale.

Spinach, Mustard and other small leaved varieties, are best washed in bunches and the leaves then cut from the bunch.

Brussels Sprouts should be left whole. But he sure to scrape and clean the heads, cut off the toughest of the butt ends, and soak in cold water for at least 10 minutes.

Broccoli cooks best when the tender, young flowerettes are cut from the stems. Cook the tougher leaves and stems for about five minutes and then add the flowerettes. In this way all become tender at the same time and no part is overcooked.

String Beans vary in size and tenderness, and the method of preparation varies accordingly. If very small and tender, they can be cooked whole, by the quick-boiling method. Larger and older beans are best "Frenched" (cut lengthwise in small pieces like shoe-string potatoes) and cooked by the waterless method. Ten minutes will turn the trick and the beans retain their bright green color.

There is a smart little cutter on the market that is just right for Frenching string beans and other vegetables.

1 pound green string beans
2 medium sized onions, chopped
1 tablespon chopped parsley
6 tablespoon butter
1 tablespon lemon juice
Salt and pepper

Inspect beans and remove strings; cook in boiling water and drain. Melt half the butter. Add onions and cook until a delicate brown. Add beans and seasonings. Saute five minutes. Add remaining butter, lemon juice and parsley. Serve at once.

The time required for the quick cooking of all vegetables varies so much according to their condition of tenderness, that I cannot gvie a set table even for my own preferneces. By the waterless method, spinach reaches the edibly tender stage in from five to 10 minutes after steaming begins. Chard and mustard take considerably longer. Brussels sprouts and broccoli usually require from 15 to 20 minutes. And remember, the shorter the time required to reach the edible stage, the better the dish.

TO SELECT GREEN VEGETABLES

Never take a wilted leaf if you can help it. It may freshen in cold water, but will never be as good as a fresh, crisp leaf. The diqerent varieties may be light or dark in color, but they should always be a bright, fresh green.

In selecting cabbage, look out for the brown, decayed leaf edges that sometimes fold inward through entire head. Test the tenderness of broccoli with the thumb-nail on the stems and look for bright colored leaves.

Sizes is a fairly reliable indication of the age of a string bean, but some varieties grow materially larger than others. Test for crispness by "snapping" one for a sample.

Very young and tender green leaves are good eaten raw. When preparing such vegetables as kale or spinach, it is a good idea to lay aside a few of the small center leaves to be crisped in the refrigerator. They make a decorative addition to the nutritive elements of a salad or appetizer and may be used as a garnish.

Tomato and Corn Are Fine for Fall

Fine feasting for Fall menus is this fat platterful of tomato and corn scramble. To make it thicken a cup and a half of milk with a flour and butter roux, using three tablespoons each. Season with a dash of salt and pepper, then add a cup of succulent fresh cooked corn cut from the cob, or an equal portion of canned whole kernel corn. Spoon in a cup of fluffy shreddel American cheese and stir gently until the sauce is smooth and the flavors are all merged. For a final fillip of fine flavor add a third of a cup of rosy, ruddy tomato ketchup to give extra zip and zing to the dish. Served on crisp toast straws with a bowl of mixed vegetable salad and a relish dish of fresh cucumber pickle and ripe olives, this makes mighty good eating for the main course of an Autumn meal.

Clever cooks nowadays contrive to keep a bottle of ketchup handy on their spice shelves near the stove to give extra snap and savor to their cokoing. A liberal dash of this rosy, ruddy colored condiment is guaranteed to tone up a temperate dish with distinction. Try spicing a barbecue sauce with this old-fashioned kettle kitchup for hamburger patties. A serving of ketchup to perk up a platterful of pepers stuffed with sausage meat and macaroni. And it's guaranteed good eating when you add tart tomato ketchup in making a crimson creole sauce for shrimp or veal. Why not try your hand at this clever ketchup cookery using these savory recipes for a starter?

BARBECUED PATTIES

Combine thoroughly
½ lb. ground round steak
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
½ cup soft bread crumbs
¼ cup milk

Form meat into patties, then brown on both side in two tablespoons fat. Combine, then pour over meat.

1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon pure cider vinegar
½ cup tomato ketchup

Cover and simmer slowly about 10 to 15 minutes, or until sauce is thick. Serve hot between heated or toasted bun halves. (Makes six.)

PEPPERS STUFFED TO PERFECTION

Cut tops from six medium sized green peppers. Remove seeds and fiber, then drop into boiling water. Remove from fire and let stand 10 minutes. Drain. Fry one pound sausage meat, crumbling into small bits with a fork. Combine meat with one medium (17-ounce) can cooked macaroni in cream sauce with cheese, one-third cup tomato ketchup. Stuff peppers with sausage mixture, then place in casserole and surround with a few tablespoons water to prevent sticking. Sprinkle tops of peppers with soft bread crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 45 minutes.

COCKTAIL SAUCE

Combine, blending thoroughly.
½ cup tomato ketchup
2 tablespoons chili sauce
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon horseradish

Chill. Serve over crab meat or other sea food cocktails.

SHRIMP WITH CREOLE SAUCE

Melt two tablespoons butter. Add, blending well, two tablespoons flour. Cook until bubbling. Add one medium (16-ounce) can chicken gumbo (creole) soup. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. All one-third to one-half cup tomato ketchup, two cups shrimps. Continue heating slowly until shrimps are heated through. Serve in a macaroni ring or over toast. The ketchup and soup give this dish a real old-fashioned creole flavor. (Serves four to six.)

VEAL CREOLE

Brown well on both sides four medium veal cutlets in four tablespoons butter or drippings. Season with salt and pepper. Add one-half cup (one medium) finely chopped onion, three-fourths cup green pepper, one bunch young carrots, cut in halves. Combine, then pour over meat and vegetables one-half cup tomato ketchup, one cup warm water. Cover and cook slowly 45 minutes. If necessary, thicken the sauce with a small amount of flour blended with melted butter.

CHOW MEIN

Cut the meat from 1½ pounds lean pork chops. Put the bones in a saucepan and add cold water to just cover. Cover the pan and cook slowly for 1 hour, then strain off the broth. Melt 2 tablespoons bacon drippings in a pan, add the pork cut in small pieces and fry until slightly browned. Add 1 cup sliced celery, ½ cup sliced onions, 1 cup sliced water chestnuts (these may be bought canned), 2 tablespoons Chinese soy sauce and the pork stock. Cover and simmer or boil gently for 20 minutes. Add 1 teaspoon sugar and 2 tablespoons cornstarch mixed with a little cold water. Let boil up to thicken and serve over mound of hot fried noodles. Chow mein noodles may be bought in cans ready to heat in the oven and use. Garnish each serving of chow mein with shredded egg, made by frying a beaten egg in a large frying pan so that it spreads out very thin. Cool and cut in shreds.

No longer will Swedish newlyweds have to remove rice from their hair and clothes aftre a marriage ceremony. Church authorities, pointing out that rice is an important article of food, suggested brides and grooms be showered with something not edible—like rose petals.

With this sensational device, exclusive to Oldsmobile, all the driver has to do is step on the accelerator, steer and stop. Photo shows the front compartment of an Oldsmobile equipped with "Hydra-Matic Drive."

A car that has no clutch or clutch pedal! A car that is capable of "thinking" and acting for itself to the extent of shifting gears automatically back and forth through four speed ranges! A car which needs only the use of accelerator pedal, brake and steering wheel to control it in 99 per cent of all driving! A car with a motor which cannot stall, and which responds with all the flexibility of electricity or steam!

In the most sensational announcement made in the automotive industry in years, Oldsmobile claims these advantages through their new Hydra-Matic Drive, which will be available on all three series cars which Olds is offering for 1940. The new drive is the product of eight years of intensive work by the Oldsmobile engineering staff, and it will be manufactured for Olds by a newly created division of General Motors in a special $3,000,000 plant in Detroit. It will be an exclusive Oldsmobile feature for 1940.

"Hydra-Matic Drive simplifies car control so amazingly that we believe it will mark as decisive an advance in car design as did the electric self-starter or four wheel brakes," says N. E. Fuchs, Jr., general manager of The Semo Motor Co.

"Briefly, it consists of a liquid flywheel combined with a fully automatic transmission, which is the outgrowth of the automatic safety transmission brought out by Olds more than two years ago. The liquid flywheel when combined with the automatic transmission eliminates the mechanical clutch and achieves many things that have been sought for years by automotive engineers.

The simpliciyt, flexibility and freedom from wear inherent in the liquid flywheel have been common knowledge among engineers for 5¢ year, but not until the perfection of this automatic transmission has it been possible to take full advantage of them.

"Most noticeable simplification of driving controls in a car equipped with Hydra-Matic Drive, is of course the absence of a clutch pedal. The left foot has no other duty than to control the headlight beam button in night driving. The right foot controls the accelerator and foot brake as in the past. Under the steering wheel is a lever, with four positions indicated on a quadrant, indicating "Neutral", "High", "Low" and "Reverse".

"To start the car moving and get away, just four operations are required. Turn the ignition key, step on the starter, move the lever under the wheel from "Neutral" to "High" position, step on the accelerator, and the car moves forward smoothly, changing its own gears through first, second, and third, until at 23 miles an hour, it enters fourth speed, a direct drive with a rear axle of 3.6 to 1. The whole process requires exactly a dozen fewer operations by the driver than with a standard clutch and transmisison. Virtually all driving is done with the lever in "High" position. "Low" is used only in deep sand or mud or in climbing or descending an extremely steep hill, where it is desired to keep the car in low gear.

"Thus, merely the pressure of the foot on the accelerator controls a speed range from a mile an hour to full throttle. If quick acceleration is needed to pass slower moving vehicles on the road, it is only necessary to press the accelerator all the way down, and instantly the gear changes from fourth to third, or "pick-up" gear, which is the equivalent of a rear axle radio of 5.25 to 1. Partially releasing the accelerator returns the gear to fourth.

"Most striking, however, is the demonstration of flexibility afforded by the performance of Hyda-Matic Drive on a hill. The new Olds can be driven up a hill at a snail's pace, and even stopped on the steepest hill without using the brake. By slightly depressing the accelerator the car can be held by the power of the motor partially applied through the liquid flywheel. Nor will this result in any injury or wear. From such a dead stop, the car will climb smoothly on up the hill by merely giving it more gas. And there is no possibility of stalling the motor.

"The sort of performance on a hill is made possible by the extraordinary advantages of the liquid flywheel, teamed up with automatic gear changing, as compared with amanual shifting and use of a mechanical clutch. A comparison of the way the two devices operate is necessary to understand these advantages.

"With a mechanical clutch, engine power is applied gradually to the transmission and rear wheels by increasing the friction between two discs until they hold firmly. The slippage between these two discs cushions the shock of applying the engine power, and does it well or badly according to the skill of the driver, and the amount of wear the clutch has undergone. Since gradual application of power through a mechanical clutch depends upon friction—and friction inevitably means wear—the best mechanical clutch that can be made starts to wear out from the instant it is first engaged.

"But with the fluid coupling of the Hydra-Matic Drive, an entirely different principle is employed. Instead of the flat plates of the mechanical clutch, there are two rotors, resembling shallow steel basins, exactly identical in size and shape. Their concave surface are divided by vanes into exactly similar patterns. These rotors are mounted with concave surfaces facing, one thirty-second of an inch apart, one attached to the crankshaft of the engine, the other to the automatic transmission. Both are enclosed in a steel housing, filled with oil under pressure from the automatic transmission.

"When the engine is started, and the rotor attached to the crankshaft starts to revolve, oil from its vanes is thrown by centrifugal force against the vanes of the rotor attached to the transmission. With the engine idling, the force is small, not enough to move the car. The oil is "slipping" between the rotors. But the slipping oil is not like slipping clutch plates—there is no wear or injury. As the motor speed increases, the slip lessens, the rotor attached to the transmission begins to turn and the car gathers speed quickly and with amazing smoothness. At normal driving ranges the slip between the rotors is less than a quarter of one per cent—utterly negligible as far as car performance is concerned.

"The action of the rotors can be compared to that of two electric fans placed facing each other, one with power on, the other, off. The idle fan is quickly started to turning, too, by the force of air from the other.

"Another advantage of the liquid flywheel lies in the fact that torsional crankshaft vibration cannot be conveyed through its oil cushion to the transmission. Likewise the smooth application of power which it affords, means far less wear and strain on the rear axle gears.

"Because the driving and driven rotors are exactly alike, the engine can serve as a brake in decending hills or in any deceleration, just as it does with mechanical clutch and standard transmission. The action between the rotors is merely reversed, and the driving members becomes the driven. For normal deceleration, the control lever can be left in the "Hi" forward position and the foot removed from the accelerator. For more positive car control when descending steep grades, the control lever can be moved to "Lo" forward position which keeps the drive in first or second gear.

"Actually, about the only operations left for the driver of a car equipped with Hyda-Matic Drive are to steer, step on it and stop. We believe that it simplifies the control of a car literally to the last degree possible, and that it will by the same measure increase the safety and pleasure of motoring."

And here is the last fish story of summer. From a farm near Hot Springs, Ark., came James Sparkman with a tale of how his cow Sally waded into a pond to get relief from the heat. When she lumbered back to the barnyard a 6-pound bass was danging from her tail, caught in the hair. But the story was not too well authenticated. Only proof Sparkman could show skeptics was—his cow's tail.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS

Brussels sprouts have made a reappearance after a considerable absence. They need care in cooking to have them at their best. Wash the sprouts, remove any wilted or discolored leaves, and let soak in cold salted water for at least 30 minutes. Drain, cover with boiling water, add 1 teaspoon sugar to each quart of sprouts, cover the pan and boil for 20 minutes—no longer. Drain, season with butter, pepper and a little salt and serve as soon as possible.

Drivers should be especially alert when coming to an intersection, for half of all accidents occur where two roads come together.

Jam Tarts Offered As New Delicacies

When you plan afternoon tea, take a tip from Scotland and serve jam tarts or one of the famous North Country drop cookies. Here are easy recipes for these delicacies that were brought to this country by Sir Thomas Lipton, the famous good loser. Whenever he was bested in a yacht race, he made a point of entertaining his victors, and directly supervised the delicacies.

This version of jam tarts was a specialty of his mother, to whom he was wholeheartedly devoted; and he always insisted that his chefs use her own recipes after he became a famous tea merchant.

Whether you plan a romantic tea for two, refreshments for the woman's club or a treat for your husband and his chess partner, these toothsome treats will be sure to win compliments.

JAM TARTS

- 3 1/3 cups sifted flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¾ teaspoon mace
- ½ cup butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 egg, well beaten
- ¼ cup milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 (10oz.) jar currant jelly or jam

Sift flour. Measure. Sift again with baking powder, salt and mace. Cream butter well. Add sugar gradually, beating until fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Add flour mixture, alternately with milk and vanilla, beating after each addition until smooth. Chill dough about 30 minutes. Roll ⅛-inch thick. Cut with floured cutters. Place a small amount of jelly or jam on a round of dough. Place another round from which the center has been cut, on top, and crisp edges together with tines of a fork. Bake on greased baking sheet in hot oven (425 degrees F.) about eight to 10 minutes. Makes about 32.

SCOTCH DROP COOKIES

- ¾ cup sifted flour
- 1 teaspon baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup butter or other shortening
- 1/3 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 1 cup raisins, chopped
- 1 cup rolled oats
- 1/3 cup milk

Sift flour. Measure. Sift again with baking powder, cinnamon and salt. Cream butter well. Add sugar gradually, beating until fluffy. Add egg and rasins. Add rolled oats. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Drop from teaspoon on ungreased baking sheet. Bake in moderate oven (350 degree F.) 15 to 20 minutes. Makes about 30.

OSLO SANDWICH LOAF

- 1 small loaf bread
- 4 cans smoked Norwegian sardines
- 4 hard cooked eggs, chopped fine
- ¾ cup shredded lettuce
- ½ cup butter, softened
- ⅛ teaspoon onion salt
- Mayonnaise

Cut all crusts from loaf of bread. Slice loaf lengthwise in three equally thick slices. Mash three cans of smoked Norwegian sardines and mix with chopped eggs, lettuce, mayonnaise and butter and seasonings to taste. Spread slices with mixture and reassemble loaf. Cover entire loaf with layer of mayonnaise and lay sardines from fourth can close together across full length of top. Chill thoroughly. Slice vertically to serve.

Of course, the success of these loaves hinges largely on the filling you use. But before taking up that, let's just consider what we might term the mechanics of making the loaf.

In the first place, you work with a whole loaf of bread—and a sharp knife. Shave the crust off the loaf, then slice it into four lengthwise pieces, making the bottom slice a little thicker than the others to facilitate serving.

Butter each slice (use softened, not melted, butter). Then slice, two other fillings on each of two other slices, set one on top of the other and finish off the reassembled loaf with the fourth slice of bread.

Now you dress the loaf. Soften a cupful of white cream cheese, mixing in enough cream to make it spread easily. Then frost the loaf, top and sides, with the mixture, cover it lightly with waxed paper and chill the loaf an hour or so.

Just before serving time, transfer the loaf carefully to a serving platter and add your frills—a design made with more cheese spread through a pastry tube, or decorations made with sliced olives and pickles and strips of green peppers or pimento.

Cut into slices about an inch thick, for serving. And here again, be sure your knife is sharp.

Chilled fillings spread easier than moist ones, so make up your fillings in advance and chill them. You'll need about a cupful of filing to a slice of loaf.

Now, as to the fillings. Here is a selection of trios, any of which is delightful. Perhaps you'll want to go further and combine one filling of one group with others from another group.

I

(a) Blend hard cooked eggs with pickles, celery, parsley, peppers and salad dressing.

(b) Mix tuna with chopped sweet pickles, olives and mayonnaise.

(c) Cream together yellow and white cream cheese, a little chopped chives, nuts and cream.

II

(a) Mix salmon, celery and sweet pickles, moisten with salad dressing.

(b) Combine white cream cheese with pimento-stuffed olives, chopped onions, and salad dressing.

(c) Blend hard cooked eggs with a little chili sauce, diced celery and cucumbers.

III

(a) Cottage cheese mixed with crushed pineapple and diced cucumbers. Moisten with a little salad dressing.

(b) Chopped cooked ham blended with chopped pickles, hard cooked eggs, celery and mayonnaise.

(c) Finely chopped cress combined with tuna, diced celery and pimentos.

IX

(a) Chicken salad blended with broken walnut meats.

(b) Pimentos cream cheese mixed with crumbled cooked bacon and a little chives.

(c) Crushed pineapple mixed with diced celery, green peppers, cucumbers and salad dressing.

QUICK FALL FEAST

How would you like to try your hand this fine fall day at a meal that will take but a trice to prepare and guarantee you good eating in the bargain? Then plan to serve copious soup plates of vegetable beef soup to start the meal with zip and zing. Just open the cans of soup and heat and serve. For the main course, bring on a fat casseroleful of delicate cooked macaroni topped with a pinwheel of tender asparagus tips. An unusual combination, to be sure, but a most delicious dish when you use the ready-to-serve cooked macaroni that comes done up in tins. This savory macaroni is simmered in a rich cream sauce flavored with a nippy blend of cheeses. It surely makes a tasty main course service when you prepare the dish this way:

MACARONI AND ASPARAGUS CASSEROLE

Arrange a thin layer from—

1 medium (17 oz.) can cooked macaroni in cream sauce with cheese in a shallow buttered casserole.

Top with a layer from—

1 small can asparagus tips, having tips radiate from center. Repeat each layer, having asparagus on top.

Sprinkle with—

¼ cup fresh bread crumbs, buttered.

Bake in a moderate oven (375° F.) 20 minutes or until macaroni is heated through. (Serves 4.)

SUCCESSFUL CHIFFONADE SALAD

With the macaroni casserole, you'll want a big bowlful of crisp salad greens drenched in a spicy dressing. Line your bowl with succulent leaves of romaine or other salad greens, then shred or cube a solid head of iceberg lettuce into the bowl and pour this cool and colorful chiffonade dressing over the greens:

BOWL OF SALAD GREENS WITH CHIFFONADE DRESSING

Line salad bowl with—

Romaine or other salad greens.

Cut in 1-inch cubes—

1 head lettuce.

Heap lettuce cubes in center of bowl and serve with chiffonade dressing (below).

CHIFFONADE DRESSING

Mix together—

- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ¼ teaspoon paprika.

Add, then beat thoroughly—

- ¼ cup pure cider vinegar
- ½ cup pure olive oil.

Add, mixing well—

- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- 2 teaspoons chopped onion
- 1 hard cooked egg, chopped
- ¼ cup chopped cooked beets.

Serve over salad greens.

DAINTY DESSERT

For dessert turn out a batch of chocolate crunch made by tossing crisp golden rice flakes in a sauce of melted dipping chocolate. Just before the dinner hour, send your nimblest youngster to the store for family sized scoops of ice cream. Then, break the crunch up into crumbles and arrange, sundae style, in deep dessert dishes. (Your youngster will love this dessert for his next party.) Here's how:

CHOCOLATE CRUNCH SUNDAE

Melt over hot water—

¼ lb. sweet dipping chocolate.

Stir in gently until they are well coated with chocolate—

1½ cups rice flakes.

Spread rice flakes in a thin layer on waxed paper and cool. Break up finely with fingers and sprinkle over Vanilla or frozen custard ice cream. (Serves 10.)

Now Is the Time To Make Pickles

If you have ever lived in the country or the "near country" you will no doubt recall September as the month when the air was filled with the smell of burning leaves and of hot, spicy vinegar. Well, I remember walking down the street and sniffing the air before house after house where the mistress was at that moment turning green tomatoes, apples, beets, cucumbers and even peaches and pears into tasty pickled products that smelt simply grand in the making.

I like September to this day as the time to begin pickling and jelly making for the Winter months even though my "pickle shelf" may be only the end of shelf in the kitchenette with room for perhaps half a dozen jars at a time. Some of my favorites are those given below. Start making them now, if you like pickles—and who doesn't? Some like 'em sweet and some like 'em sour; take your choice of the few varieties given here. More will appear in a couple of weeks as other foods suitable for pickling come into markets.

GREEN TOMATOES USED

Green tomatoes are largely used in making such delicacies as green tomato soy, picalilli and a number of other more or less similar varieties. Green tomato soy claims our interest at the moment and here is how you make about three quarts of delicious pickle.

Select firm, medium sized green tomatoes, wash them, remove the stem end and slice the tomatoes, using enough to make four quarts measured after slicing. Cut six fair sized white onions in thin slices and mix them with the tomatoes. Mix these with two cups vinegar, two cups light brown sugar (less if you like a more sour pickle), one tablespoon cooking salt, one tablespoon black pepper, one tablespoon dry mustard and one-half tablespoon each ground allspice and cloves. Mix and then cook gently until the tomatoes and onions are tender, stirring the concoction frequently. When done, cool and then pack into glass preserve jars or into a stone crock. If a crock is used it must have a close fitting cover.

This is a memory task, but the results when the pickles are finished, warrant it. At the end of the second three days, drain the cucumbers, wipe each one with cloth and cut in chunky pieces about an inch thick. Line a large preserving kettle with grape leaves, put in the cucumber chunks and cover with a mixture of equal parts vinegar and water. Boil gently for two hours or until the cucumbers are tender and almost transparent. Mix together two pounds sugar, three pints vinegar, one ounce stick cinnamon, one ounce celery salt and one-half ounce whole allspice and heat to the boiling point. Drain the cucumbers, put them in a crock or in glass jars and pour the boiling sugar syrup over them to cover completely. Next day, pour off the spiced syrup, reheat to the boiling point and pour over the pickles again. Repeat this each day until you have done it four times. If the juice boils down and is not enough to cover the pickles, add more vinegar. When done, store in a dark place. These are delicious and well worth the trouble they take.

Corn relish is an entirely different type of pickle—sour rather than sweet and lightly mustardy in flavor. Cut the corn from 18 medium-sized ears of uncooked corn. Slice a bunch of cleaned celery and finely chop a two-pound head of cabbage; slice four onions and chop four green peppers from which the seeds have been removed. Mix all the vegetables together, put in a large kettle and add one quart of vinegar. Mix together one cup flour, one-half cup salt, one and one-half teaspoons dry mustard, one and one-half teaspoons tumeric powder, one-quarter teaspoon cayenne pepper and gradually add one quart vinegar. Heat the vegetable mixture to the boiling point, add the flour mixture to it, stirring constantly and boil very slowly for 40 minutes. Pack into hot, sterilized preserve jars.

Lower Back Pains

Pains in the lower spine have had more causes, according to the opinions of many writers, than any other weakness that can happen to the human body. Diseased tonsils, abscessed teeth, thyroid and gall bladder infection, chronic appendicitis and many other local infections have in turn, been blamed for the punishing pains in the lower spine. That the X-Ray, in recent years, should show that most lower back pains are due to interference with the lumbar and sacral nerves, was only a natural outcome of scientific research. Chiropractic today is recognized almost all over the civilized world as a specific correction for lower back pain, because it is concerned only with the correction of nerve interference and the adjustment of the spine. Recent scientific papers read by other healing professions show a marked turn to recommend the correction of abnormal mechanical interference to nerves in the lower spine for relief from pelvic pain and weakness.

HOME OWNERS FORUM

By ABNER GORDON

REPAIR of structural cracks in plaster walls and ceilings does not necessitate refinishing the entire surface.

Such fissures are caused by settlement due to faulty construction or lumber shrinkage.

Crack should be scraped with knife blade until opening is at least one-quarter inch at surface, tapering slightly wider to base, so sufficient fresh plaster may be forced in to assure firm bond.

Brush out all loose sand and plaster Then wet down crack area to prevent old plaster from absorbing moisture from patch, causing it to set poorly and remain chalky.

Press fresh plaster well into place and strike off even with surface.

Spray water onto surface after plaster patch has set, keeping area damp for 24 hours.

In making plaster, place water in mixing box before sifting in dry plaster. Stir the mix thoroughly to dissolve lumps. Plaster putty consistency should be such that it can be picked up with trowel and forced into crack. Add small quantity of ordinary glue to mix, if plaster sets too rapidly.

Q.—My cement flooring is dusting. What treatment do you suggest?

A.—Treat "soft," dusting cement with solution one part water glass (sodium silicate liquid form) to four parts water. This hardens the surface and should eliminate dusting.

When solution has thoroughly dried, two coats of oil paint, plus enamel finish for hard wear, will seal cement against atmospheric conditions, eliminating this cause for dusting.

As priming coat apply paint composed of 3 parts by volume soft paste white lead and 5 parts of a half and half mixture of raw linseed oil and lead mixing or lead reducing oil.

For body coat use 6 parts soft paste white lead, 1 part raw linseed oil, 4 parts turpentine. Add ½ pint drier for each 100 lbs. soft paste white lead used.

For finish use high grade floor enamel.

SPECIFIC CHARGES MADE IN GRAVES CASE

Jefferson City, September 25.—Attorney General Roy McKittrick today answered the State Supreme Court's request for "more specific and certain" charges against Jackson County Prosecutor W. W. Graves by citing a long list of cases which he charged Graves "failed and refused" to prosecute.

The Attorney General, who was urged last Friday by Gov. Lloyd C. Stark to use all possible speed in his suit to oust the indicted Prosecutor from office, declared:

"Laws prohibiting gambling, bookmaking, lotteries, bawdy houses, brothels and houses of assignation have been openly and notoriously violated" in Jackson County. "Although the respondent (Graves) knew of said violations, he has * * * refused to investigate," he charged.

"Many violations were committed in the presence and with the knowledge and consent" of the T. J. Pendergast-supported Prosecutor, McKittrick declared in an amendatory petition to his original ouster proceedings filed last May.

The Attorney General charged that not only had Graves failed to prosecute criminal cases pending in the Jackson County Circuit Court, "but on the contrary has in a great number of cases dismissed or caused to be dismissed charges on which he had sufficient material and legal evidence available to convict."

SIKESTON STANDARD

Southeast Missouri's Leading Semi-Weekly

VOLUME 28 — SIKESTON, SCOTT COUNTY, MISSOURI FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1939 — NUMBER 4

THE STANDARD- ONLY Streamlined Newspaper IN SIKESTON DISTRICT

The P. C. Editor Says:

Our pet polecat, "Clint H.", will be missed from The Standard booth in the Jubilee tent as he is being used in the conservation exhibit at Jefferson City this week. A long distance call to Jefferson City asked to have him returned for the Jubilee but whether or not he will get in in time for our display remains to be seen. However, we will have on display a civit cat skin in a frame that might do.

* * *

While a good soaking rain is badly needed over this section. We hope it will not visit us until after the Jubilee is over, the tent down and everybody gets home. Then let her come.

The Standard management has given orders that no more blind ads will be run in our want column of this paper referring prospects to 'The Standard box number. It is a nuisance to the office officials and causes extra work and then we get tongue lashings from some folks, all for 25 cents. If you can't give your phone, your house address, or your name, it will not be run in The Standard.

It is still undecided which day will be Turkey Day in Charleston and Sikeston. President Roosevelt has taken it upon himself to designate Thursday, November 23, as Thanksgiving Day instead of the age-old last Thursday in November, and Governor Stark has trailed along. It matters not which day the President and Governor backs, Thursday, November 30, will be our Thanksgiving Day.

Most boys who start lifes work by carrying country newspapers have a bright future ahead of them. One boy who formerly carried The Standard is now doing fourteen years at Joliet, Ill., and he was a high type boy when he first entered the employ of The Standard. You can never tell.

In the mail Thursday morning came a box containing two loaves of pumpernickel rye bread from the Diedrich pastry shops of St. Louis, sent at the request of E. J. Hoke of that city. Then another package from the Walter Freund Bread Co. of St. Louis containing a loaf of rye bread 18 inches long and big around. It certainly pays to advertise as the paragraph carried in The Standard last week wishing for a loaf of old fashioned rye bread brought us results from Kansas City, Jackson, and two from St. Louis. We'll say we'll eat rye bread and like it.

Squire Gupton, of Morley, was in town Wednesday forenoon and feeling fine and thankful that he escaped without a scratch in a recent wreck. R. D. The French and the British soldiers in Europe are again fighting our fight in that country and it is as little as we can do to furnish all kinds of Red Cross aid for the wounded. Maybe it would save the life of some soldier to have the Red Cross bandages handy to bind up his wound. Can't you cut out your cigarettes, your beer or other belly wash for a week or more and give that money to the Red Cross.

Curly hair is at times a handicap for a real boy though is very sightly to the girls and especially to a fond mother. Boys in the football squad who have heavy growths of hair and wear the head gear in practice and in contests usually have their hair trimmed fairly short. All but one followed this rule but this one was caught off the school grounds and given an amateur hair cut by some unknown horse clipper artist and when he was unhaltered and turned loose, he hiked for home and then it was that the mother discovered how her son's head of curls had been butchered by some funny cut-up. The Superintendent was called but he knew nothing; the Coach was called and he knew nothing. The dastardly deed was not committed on the school ground and their control reached no further.

Short Cotton Season Seen In Weather

Unless Rains and Cold Wave Checks, Picking To Last About Month

Five weeks of hot, dry weather have meant heavy pickings and good quality in the cotton fields, but at the rate the crop is going to the gins an extra short season is in prospect.

Most merchants and business men depending on the cotton trade would rather see the season extended over a longer period, with some rainy and cool weather to break up the picking periods. In many cases, the faster money is made in the cotton industry the faster and more loosely it is spent.

NEARLY HALF PICKED

Between 40 and 50 per cent of this season's cotton already has been picked, it was estimated at the office of the New Madrid County agent.

If the present type of weather should continue, the cotton season may not last over another month longer, W. C. Robinson, assistant agent of New Madrid county, estimated.

Some years picking has gone into January.

SCOTT COUNTY RECORD

For the first half of September, Scott County gins turned out 2115 bales of cotton, in contrast with 937 for the same period last year, according to the report of Tharon Stallings, special agent for the Department of Commerce Bureau of Census.

This figure denotes an exceptionally heavy output, because ginnings last year were considered high as compared with the 1937 results.

QUALITY UP

The weather, and persistent efforts of county agents', ginners and others to have better seed planted, are responsible for the higher quality this season. Delta & Pine Land 11A and Stoneville Ambassador varieties are the favorites, and produce a better staple.

A price upturn since the European war started, and lower ginning costs, increased the amount to the farmer. A price now of $50 a bale means approximately a $20,000,000 crop in Southeast Missouri.

Randolph to Trial Oct. 20

At the request of the defense counsel, Circuit Judge Schult continued until Oct. 20 the trial of Hershel Randolph, Sikeston land agent charged with felonious assault, in court at New Madrid Tuesday morning.

Milo Grasham, attorney for the defendant, said he had been unable to serve a subpoena on a witness out of the city.

Randolph is accused of attacking Alfonse Deschamp, farmer near Morehouse, last spring in downtown Sikeston.

Davis Plays in Maryville Opener

Carol Davis, football and basketball star of Sikeston High School last season, played nearly a full half in the opening game of the Maryville, Mo., Teachers College, M. I. A. A. champions, against the Talaquah, Okla., Teachers at Maryville last week, won by the Missourians, 7-0.

A backfield man at Sikeston, Carol was shifted to end at Maryville. Playing 19 minutes of the game is an unusual distinction for a freshman, especially when there are six letterman ends already on the squad. The team meets Washington U. at St. Louis this week.

Carol is rated an excellent chance of making the first string of Maryville's basketball squad.

JAYCEES VOTE $5 TO SEWING ROOM

The Junior Chamber of Commerce Tuesday evening voted to contribute $5 to the Red Cross sewing room to be established in the armory building.

Cadillac Knocks Old Car 25 Feet, Driver Escapes

A Cadillac sedan that hit a Model A sedan croswise knocked it 25 feet along Highway 61 at the Bell City road intersection, 11 miles north of Sikeston, at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, but the driver of the smaller car, Sylvester Tanner, 62, of near Advance, escaped with minor injuries. Tanner's car did not turn over, according to State Trooper Melvin Dace.

As mashed front was the damage to the Cadillac, driven by Ray R. Fisher, 50, of Detroit, Mich., who was accompanied by Harvey G. Taggart of Detroit. They were bound for Detroit, from Memphis. The side of the Ford was staved in. Tanner was traeated for cuts and brises at Oran. The others were not hurt.

Sgt. Dace said the farmer's car pulled onto the highway in front of the Cadillac.

In Custody on Check Charges

Man Taken Here Said To Have Passed $700 Worth at Steele, Mo.

At the request of Dunklin County authorities, City Officer Claude McManus Tuesday evening arrested Andrew Lovell, 45, of Holland, Mo., on a charge of issuing worthless checks at Steele. Constable Spense of Steele took Lovell there Wednesday morning.

The constable said Lovell is named in several warrants on charges of passing bad checks totaling about $700. Lovell, a stock dealer, was taken into custody at the auction barn.

Before he was surrendered to Dunklin County, the prisoner was compelled to pay $8 of an old fine against him here. He was arrested here several months ago after allegedly hiring a taxi to haul him from Sikeston to Caruthersville and back and failing to pay for the ride. Unable to pay a $10 fine at the time, he was committed to the city street, but departed after working two days, it was stated at police headquarters. He was allowed $2 for the days he worked.

Rye Bread Prayer Answered From K. C.

Kansas City, Sept. 25.—Col. C. L. Blanton, owner and editor of the Sikeston Standard, will eat rye bread tomorrow. Rye bread is his weakness. According to a paragraph in his "Polecat Column", a column given over to Colonel Blanton's salty comments, rye bread also is a weakness of the Sikeston bakers.

"It's not real rye bread," Scribe Blanton complains. "Tastes more like a mixture of bran and sawdust. Wish we could buy a loaf of real old fashioned rye once in a while, the kind you can get in the city."

This morning Mayor Bryce B. Smith received a clipping containing the Sikeston editor's supplication for "rye that is rye." The Mayor, whose large fortune was amassed as a successful baker and who, in being cast by circumstance in the role of baker missed being the successful newspaper man his natural flair would have made him, saw in the item his chance for a daily good deed. Slipping away from the superelegance of the Mayor's great deep-carpeted, walnut panelled office, to the lesser loveliness, albeit cleanliness, of the Smith Bakery, he repaired to the mixing room.

There are two stories of what happened next . . . One is that the diminutive baker-Mayor shucked his ever-immaculate raiment and donned the white cap, coat and apron of a baker. The other is that he stood over a mixing board while one of the regular bakers worked under his instructions. So far as Colonel Blanton is concerned, it makes no difference which story is true—the Colonel will eat such rye bread tomorrow as he perhaps never clamped his teeth down on before—rye bread as black as his hat and with "everything" that real rye possesses in the way of pungence. A 3-pound loaf of it was headed toward Colonel Blanton's address this afternoon, with the compliments of Mayor Smith and a letter inviting Colonel Blanton and "all members of the great tribe of Missouri Blantons" to come to Kansas City next Saturday, September 30, to attend the Kansas City Air Fair and Airport rededication, the Aviation Banquet in the evening and, if his 76-year-old feet haven't lost their reaction to such tantalizing rhythm as that from the band of Ben Bernie and all the Lads, to stay for the night session of swing and the floor show, at the great Kansas City Municipal Auditorium.

In his letter of invitation, Mayor Smith wrote:

"If only those Blantons who are newspaper editors in Missouri come to the Airport Dedication, we'll have a sizable crowd."

Big Southeast Missouri Jubilee Arrives With Many Attractions

JUBILEE Hot Spots

Those tent erectors had the system. On the rear of one truck was a genuine pile-driver. Manipulated by the car motor, the driver pounded in those mighty tent stakes as a big steam driver would beat in posts for a railroad bridge.

Yellow and green pennants and bunting appeared over downtown streets and on store fronts almost by magic.

In order that the music may travel over the dance floor better, Scientillating Ina Ray Hutton and her Playboys will occupy a stand placed down on the dance floor, instead of the armory stage. Reason: Acoustic defects swallowed part of Bernie Cummins' music when the band played from the stage at the last dance.

Up to Tuesday, reservations for tables at the dance had been made for 410 persons, according to Charles Bethune, the chief reservator. Hurry! They are going . . . going. . .

Man Accused Of Taking Billfold Containing $50

Constable Walter Ancell, City Officer Claude McManus and Deputy Constable Leroy Heisserer Tuesday arrestel Clyde Barnes, 36, at Morehouse on a charge of stealing $50 from the Grant Bros. Store at McMullin. Twenty-eight dollars was recovered, Constable Ancell said, but the remainder was spent.

The money was taken when Gene Grant left his wallet momentarily in the store washroom and went to serve a motorist outside. Barnes, according to the constable, went into the washroom and the billfold was missing shortly after.

When Barnes was caught, he took officers to where he had tossed the billfold, behind a downtown tavern, and then accompanied them to a farm south of Hunterville where the $28 was hidden, the constable said. He had bought $8.40 worth of clothes and left them at a downtown store, but this sum was redeemed by the store, the officer said.

Brought to the Sikeston jail, Barnes, who formerly lived at McMullin and now resides at Hunterville, was released when charges were not pressed.

Mr. Middleton, employed at the Bus Matthews service station, was using the air hose across the street when his own compressor failed . He was taken by Constable Walter Ancell to Dr. H. B. Traveling Around America

WITCHES AND TOTEM POLES

THIS Indian woman shown with her ceremonial drum is one of the Araucanians of Chile. The totem-pole effect is the altar of the witch doctor or machi, who drives away their ills. The altar is a series of steps cut in a log, topped usually by the carving of a face, and always adorned with branches of the Canelo, the sacred tree of the Araucanians. The Canelo has played an important role in the life of the Araucanians for hundreds of years. In its shade their feasts were held and their councils of war and peace. The tree always stands in front of the machi's house to drive the evil spirits away—he uses branches of the sacred tree in all the mystic ceremonies he employs to cure illness, to foretell future events, to find lost articles and people, and to win the favor of the gods.

Very often the machi is called upon by a family to petition the spirits to send rain and a rich harvest. A feast is held to which all friends and relatives are invited. The machi altar is set up near a Canelo tree. From its top the machi addresses the spirits, accompanying his prayers with wild gesticulations and chants while assembled guests sing and dance around the foot of the altar and the sacred tree. The ceremony ends in the "sacred leap" when the machi jumps from the altar into the arms of men below. The celebration, it goes without saying, is heavily accompanied by food and drink. This is only one of dozens of mystic rites still observed by Araucanian tribes — their primitive villages scattered around Temuco are one of the most intriguing sights to be seen on the weekly cruises to Chile.—EDNA MAE STARE

6000 Acres to Be Cleared at Greenville

Greenville, Mo., Sept. 25.—Contracts for clearing approximately 6000 acres, which will be covered by the "permanent pool," created by the Wappapello flood control dam now under construction, will be let shortly, according to Maj. Daniel C. Nose of the Memphis, Tenn., office, War Department Engineers.

Maj. Nose notified the Wayne County Court of plans to award contracts so the basin could be cleared by the time the dam is ready for use. Work is expected to start shortly after October 1.

The County Court was advised it could bid on the clearing contract involving the county-owned land, and there were indications that individual property owners, whose land is being purchased by the government for condemnation, will be given permission to bid on clearing the land they are vacating.

No announcement has been made as to whether the land must be cleared by a certain time.

Those bidding on clearing projects, it was indicated, will be permitted to take all timber and dispose of it in their own way. Some of the finest timber in the Wappapello National Forest unit may be found in the 6000-acre basis, timber experts say.

When the dam is placed in service—about two years from now—the 6000-acre lake will be stocked with fish and will be used for recreational purposes. The stage of the lake will remain stationary except in times when it will be necessary to close the gates at the dam and hold back floodwaters following heavy rains, in order to prevent danger to the St. Francis River levees below the dam.

When the dam is in full service the lake will be about 65 feet deep just north of the dam and will cover approximately 25,000 acres. That is the reason it has been found necessary to move the county seat, Greenville, to a new location. The 114-year-old county seat town likely will be rebuilt on the hills about two miles north.

A man who believes that if Mohammed cannot come to the mountain, the mountain should be moved to Mohammed is Joseph A. Massey, a member of the Town Council of New Carlisle, Ind. Massey built himself a new home, was chagrined to discover it was outside the town limits, which nullified his membership on the Council. Since he could not move his house into town, he had the town move out to him by extending its limits.

Well, well, it is a small world after all. Father John Gabriels, pastor of a Lansing, Mich., church, was visiting the Holy Land when he saw a swarthy native brakeman eyeing him on a train. The brakeman finally introduced himself, revealed he was a former parishioner of the Lansing priest—at the Ionia, Mich., Reformatory.

Roy Welch, Feroni Come Out on Top

Roy Welch and Joe Feroni were winners Wednesday night in the Legion arena, and the bruisers, George Bennett and Charles Sinkey, were losers.

Welch took the last two from Bennett after considerable bruising in the first, and Feroni flattened Sinkey in the first and third.

Bennett was no gentleman. He butted Roy's head against the iron rings holding the ropes and caused Mike Meroney to all but disqualify him early in the match. The Utah grappler took the first in 17 minutes with a body pin. The Canadian won the next two the same way, in seven and six-minute falls.

Feroni was at his best against the Mississippi Mauler. Both men fouled, but Sinkey was kept at bay by the New Yorker a great part of the time.

The first went to Feroni in 16 minutes with a body pin. Sinkey came back in 13 minutes with a half-jackknife, and Feroni settled it in 12 minutes with a arm lock.

WPA TO HIRE 5000 MORE IN MISSOURI

Jefferson City, Sept. 27.—Missouri's WPA rolls will go up 5000 in October—the first increase in the state's monthly employment quota within a year.

Acting Administrator E. M. Basye said the state rolls will be expanded to 65,000 next month.

Most of those added will be taken from the ranks of workers laid off last summer as a result of the rule against more than 18 months of continuous WPA employment, Basye said.

For 10 successive months after Missouri hit its peak of 117,000 WPA workers last fall there had been a steady decrease to the September low of 60,000

Hitler's Mother Schooled Him in Greatness

ADOLF HITLER, the man whose shadow darkens all Europe today, inherited from his mother and father those traits that make him what he is: a ruthless plunderer, a self-appointed Messiah to lead Germany back to greatness.

From his mother, Klara Poelzl, who ran away from home at fifteen and came back a broken and defeated woman ten years later, Hitler inherited his "mission" in life and the will to achieve it. Klara coddled her son, fawned on him, coached him in greatness, sought to hide his physical weakness (he was a puny child) with an outergrowth of demi-God arrogance, says Jerry Allen in an article, "Directors of Destiny," in the October Good Housekeeping.

Greatness His Fetish.

Alois Hitler, twenty-three years his wife's senior, despised his son for his weakness. He was tall and powerful and a drinking man, and he never missed a chance to beat and torment Adolf. From his father Hitler learned what fear and hatred and what force can do.

"He was terrified of his father, hated him for the beatings he received himself and for those his mother suffered," writes Allen. "Yet he saw that the ability to give those beatings, pure force, makes a man boss, even in his own home. And he has never forgotten that in boss rule it is force that counts."

Hitler was a poor student, he couldn't concentrate on his studies. He failed in everything but drawing and gymnasium. Klara made excuses that the schools were at fault. She transferred him from one to another, with no improvement. But in Adolf's aptitude for drawing, she envisioned him a great artist. All artists, she said, were "moonstruck." Adolf was different from other boys, in her estimation.

Only once did Klara waver in her belief that Hitler was destined for greatness. That was when he was expelled from school for smoking. Terrified that he might follow in his father's footsteps — "a man who drank too much, ate too much, smoked too much"—she worked on him with such hawk-like attention that soon he was able to resist every temptation. As a result, Hitler grew up without any close friends, without a girl of his own (his mother was the substitute), without a full life. He grew up a loafer. He loved the soft life.

Hitler was fourteen when his father died. Five years later his mother followed. Although she was suffering from cancer, it was the shock of Adolf's failure to pass the entrance examinations at the Art Academy in Vienna, that killed her. She left a proud, penniless youth who didn't know how and didn't want to work.

"Ever since then," Allen says, "Hitler has been trying to justify his mother's faith in him."

SOUR MILK

Buttermilk cannot be said to have a nutritional value equal to that of fresh milk, since most of the fat has been removed. It does, however, contain practically the same amount of good body-building protein and minerals that are found in sweet milk. Due to its content of lactic and it can be used by some adults more effectively than sweet milk.

Sour milk or buttermilk makes waffles, pancakes, doughnuts, cakes, biscuits and muffins that are light and more tender than those made with sweet milk. This is because the lactic acid in these milks soften the gluten which is that part of the flour that causes toughness in baker products.

When sour milk is substituted for smeet milk in baking, these rules have been found practicable: As a leavening agent 1 teaspoon of soda is equivalent to 4 teaspoons of baking powder. One-half teaspoon soda is required to neutralize 1 cup sour milk or cream.

To substitute sour milk for sweet in a recipe, use the same amount of sour milk as sweet milk called for, add ½ teaspoon soda for each cup, and subtract two teaspoons baking powder from the amount given. For example, if a recipe calls for 1 cup sweet milk and 4 teaspoons baking powder use 1 cup sour milk, ½ teaspoon soda, and 2 teaspoons baking powder.

If sour cream is used in place of sour milk, the amount of fat used must be reduced.

A telephone call sent six policemen to a Cheltenham, Pa., home in search of a prowler. They saw a suspicious looking man, crept cautiously up behind him, suddenly pounced on him. Then they apologized. Their captive was a fellow detective assigned to patrol the district nightly—looking for prowlers.

COURT WILL DECIDE HOW TO DON CORSET

Albany, N. Y.. Sept. 27.—Do you step into your corset milady, or do you pull it over your head?

Learned Judges of the Appellate Division of the New York State Supreme Court face consideration of the subject in an action involving the appeal of Miss Anna P. Enright, Binghampton shop owner, from a lower court award of $5500 damages to Mr. and Mrs. Frederick P. Welch, also of Binghampton.

Mrs. Welch claims a clerk in the Enright shop pulled a "two-way stretch corset" over her head and, though she proteted of pain, continued to "pull, yank and tug." She contends she dislocated a vertebra, for which a lower court granted her $4500. Her husband received $1000 for loss of her services.

Lower court testimony featured a discussion of how to get into a corset.

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
Kansas City, Missouri

Sept. 25, 1939

Col. C. L. Blanton
Polecat Editor
Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri

My dear Colonel Blanton:

My friend Harry Jacks, of The Missouri Democrat, called my attention to your dilemma regarding the rye bread. To one whose life has been devoted to providing bread to those who hunger for it, your plea was quite moving.

Looking toward the realization of your wish, I am mailing to you under a separate cover, in this mornings mail, a loaf of rye bread that I believe you will declare is all that a rye bread connoiseuer could ask for. At least it is the best an old time baker could do after spending several years away from the mixing board and doing his mixing mostly in politics.

I hope it pleases your taste. If it does, then please accept my invitation to you and to all of the widespread Blanton family throughout Missouri, to attend the dedication of the Kansas City Municipal Airport, here, next Saturday, the Aviation banquet in the evening and if those feet still yearn for rythm at the age of 76, we'll take in the Aviation Ball at the big Municipal Auditorium that night, where Ben Bernie and his Lads will furnish the music.

If only those Blantons who are in the newspaper business in Missouri come to the dedication, we're assured of a crowd.

Here's hoping the bread goes over.

Cordially yours,
BRYCE B. SMITH,
Mayor.

REMEDY GARDEN FAULTS

At this season of the year many homemakers with other members of the family are checking over their garden success for any faults that may be corrected next spring. By this method the garden can be made to yield a maximum return and the family will have an adequate supply of vegetables to use fresh to can and to store.

Often the rows of vegetables are planted too close together in the home garden to permit proper development and cultivation. Observation at this season of the year will help the grower to know which crops require wide growing room and will show whether or not the planting distance between the rows is correct.

A second common fault with the planting of a number of garden vegetables is that they are planted too thick in the row. It will also be helpful to the gardened to oberve the arrangement of crops in the garden to see whether the quick-maturing crops—those which will be in the garden only a few weeks—are growing together and those which will be in the garden all the year are planted side by side.

The advantage of such an arrangemnet is that if the early maturing crops are planted together as soon as they are harvested, that area which they occupied can be used for later plantings. This plan conserves space which is an important item with many family gardens.

It is a good idea at this time of the year to check on whether too much or too little of any one planting of a vegetable has been made. It is a common sight in many garden to see rows of lettuce and radishes with all of the plants having passed the stage of development where their quality is the best for table use. Small plantings of each vegetable should have been made at two week intervals to have the best quality produce instead of planting them all at one time. The same thing is true of spinach, carrots, beets, mustard and several other crops.

PLANS COMPLETE FOR NEIGHBOR DAY

Benton Neighbor Day, sponsored by the Scott County Farm Bureau is expected to be "bigger and better" this year. More entertainment and the biggest premium list in a number of years should encourage a large attendance and more exhibits.

At a special meeting of the Farm Bureau Board held Friday, September 22, arrangements were made to have guards for the display tables. "Exhibitors can expect to have their exhibits taken care of and returned to them in good order," says Carl O. Luper, President of the Scott County Farm Bureau.

"Neighbor Day" is exactly what the name says—a meeting of neighbors. Scott County is a farmers county and farm and home exhibits are earnestly solicited. "Farmers come and bring your exhibits and spend the day visiting with your neighbors", is the invitation extended by the Scott County Farm Bureau.

ODDS AND ENDS

The garbage of New York City is valued at $1,000,000 a year as fertilizer and hog feed.

Airplane engineers report that the placing of engines in the wings reduce the drag as much as one-fifth.

A newly developed Air Corps plane is reported to be capable of climbing 5000 feet in 1.6 minutes. The ship is known as the CW-21 and cruises at a speed of more than 300 miles an hour at 17,500 feet.

A new light plane has a tricycle type landing gear, the front wheel of which is steerable. The plane is of all metal construction except for fabric on the outer wing panels. The ship carries two passengers at a top speed of 101 miles an hour.

To maintain flying speed throughout the takeoff, a telephone hook-up between a glider and launching car was recently tried in England. Wires threaded through the towing cable keeps the pilot in communication with the ground crew until the plane is loosed.

The Standard $2.00 per year.

Going Off to School? Then Take a Hint—

NEW vistas and new settings face thousands of girls in their teens who are off to boarding school or college for the first time this month. A stranger to everyone, certain to feel homesick, the new girl must get on and make friends as quickly as possible.

How can you get people who don't know you interested in you? Henrietta Ripperger asks in the October Good Housekeeping. Move one is to get yourself done up in a way so as to attract attention. Eyes will turn your way and people will want to know who the cute trick is. Be ultra-fussy about grooming, Miss Ripperger advises. Take time to dress. Look out for slip trouble.

Before leaving for school, it's wise to find out what's being worn on the campus. Be subtle about color. You're grown-up now, so forget navy blue and white sweaters and try maize, French blue, pearl gray—to go with skirts of prune, brown, or dark red. Something important to bring along is a bright, short, enormous necklace. It's the little touches that make you stand out.

Move two is getting off on the right foot. Don't, Miss Ripperger warns, bring mother along. You may as well start in from the beginning on your own. Mother means well, of course, but . . .

Don't force your opinions on a crowd you don't know very well. This doesn't mean be a clam, but a chatter-box is infinitely worse. And above everything, don't talk about your family. Dad may be the smartest man in the world to you, but that's what every girl thinks. Other don'ts on your "must" list are: Don't talk about the family wealth; all the men whose hearts you've broken; your old school where you were a big-shot, and don't look down your nose when sororities or fraternities are mentioned.

It's the most wonderful feeling in the world to have your friends say later on: "We were all crazy about you the minute we set eyes on you!"

GUIDES TO BUYING WOMEN'S COATS

Chilly mornings are reminders that winter coats will be needed soon. The old one may be satisfactory if relined and cleaned. If it has served its day then a new one will be necessary. The following guides will assist you in your selection.

Make certain when trying on a coat that it is comfortable when you walk, set or reach up. Read all labels giving information about the fabric, fur or workmanship. Long wearing weaves are firm and close, with about as many yarns in one direction as the other. The yarns are even in size so that all wear and soil alike. A loosely woven fabric tends to become baggy with wear.

Another important item is a lining that will last as long as the coat. Other qualities of a good lining are attractive appearance and a slippery texture that makes the coat easy to put on and take off. The lining should be colorfast, resistant to wrinkling, proof to water spots, and have a guarantee against shrinkage.

The most serviceable lining for an all-purpose coat is a good firm quality of pure-dye silk. A weighted silk may give satisfactory wear for a year or two. The better qualities of rayons give good service also but they need to be securely seamed to avoid fraying.

The warmth of a coat depends a great deal on its interlining. Wool, either as a woven fabric or as fibers quilted between cotton and mull, is desirable in an all-purpose coat. In sports coats, chamois-like materials turn cold and wind effectively. Look for tags that describe the interlining.

Our 42nd Year in Southeast Missouri

WHO TAKES THE CAKE?

Many who attended the Jubilee last year will recall the major part of our Frigidaire demonstration was carried on by Mrs. Octavia Webb of the Frigidaire Company, a recognized range specialist. We are sure all will be delighted to learn that Mrs. Webb will again be in charge of the Frigidaire booth under the big mercantile tent. There will be a distinct difference however in the Frigidaire Range program. Last season Mrs. Webb merely talked to interested callers relative to advantages of cooking with electricity. This year a beautiful new Frigidaire Range will be installed on the platform just as it would be in a home and Mrs. Webb will do plain and fancy cooking directly in front of interested housekeepers—and will answer all questions asked on that subject. She will also lecture as she cooks on accepted methods of saving steps in kitchens while at the same time demonstrating how to preserve natural flavors and full nutrition in cooked foods.

A special feature of Mrs. Webbs program this time will be the mixing and baking of several cakes each day in this Frigidaire Range—and of course these fine cakes will be given away. We don't know just exactly how it will be done but two or three times each day some one will "take the cake". Please call and give Mrs. Webb a second welcome. She deserves it.

MOORE'S HEATERS—PHILCO RADIOS—IN TENT

Mr. Stroude of the Moore Stove Works will be on hand to tell you all about Moore's Heaters and Ranges—both coal and oil burning types and Sam Wilcox will also be there to say a few words in praise of Philcos—For the week Sam will be known as Mr. "Philcox". Both these gentlemen will have samples to show and improvements on them that warrant your attention. Give 'em a break pleace—while doing the big Tent Show.

GOOD LUCK TO MR. LEECH

Owners of this store received quite a shock few days ago when presented with the resignation of E. N. Leech—known among boys around the store as "Newt". For almost nine years Mr. Leech has been our head salesman and during that time he has made a fine record of sales. Energetic—honest and attentive to service due his patrons—we spent no time—worrying about kick backs on his transactions. He goes to Helena, Arkansas at a considerable advance in earnings on which promotion we congratulate him. He will be distinctly missed by the store force and by hundreds whom he has served during his stay with us. May his usefulness increase in his new home.

Important Themes Of The Paris Openings

(As gathered by Harper's Bazaar editors)

SILHOUETTES—The new torso is dramatic and corsets make it come true—the full bust, the rounded hips, and the infinitesimally tiny waist. It is a toss-up between cigarette slimness and the hour-glass figure in day dresses and in evening gowns. Modesty is more sensational than nakedness—the completely covered silhouette reveals every atom of the torso.

FABRICS—Fabrics are sumptuous both day and night. There is glamour in stiff satins, velvets, and taffetas, and the richness of lames and brocades. Plaids flourish by day in short box-coats over plain colored dresses and at night in coats of wool, velvet, or brocade.

SPANISH—The Spanish wave sweeps in with bullfighter snoods, with Infanta headdresses, with flashes of Goya red against dead black, with matador hats, with soutache braid everywhere.

DRESSES—The afternoon dress returns simple as a school girl's, dramatically severe in line, marvelously rich in material. Skirt themes are important—the bustles that accent the skirt in back, the huge bows placed low in front, the polonaise draping at the sides, and the feeling of movement always.

PERIOD INFLUENCES—This is a year for romantics—for poetic Victorian taffetas with touches of white lace at the wrist and neckline, for stiff velvets enormously full like a Velasquez painting, for slim flowing brocades with tiny Edwardian waists, and for Sargeant portrait gowns. There are Victorian revivals in muffs, in bonnets, in pelerines, in bustles, in sequins, and in ostrich feathers.

ACCENTS—Pile wide bibs of jewels at the neckline of plain black dresses. Show your leopard spots in coats, in hats, in muffs, in capes, in shoes, and even in umbrella handles. Embroideries are used, furs are encrusted with paillettes, and wide ribbons are tied under the chin of romantic little bonnets. In color, watch for the splash of vermillion on dead black, for the new dark blue called winter blue, and for the color of tangerines in blouses.

★ FASHION PREVIEW ★

BACK-SWISH takes the play and catches the eye in this bright dress of blue and rose candy-striped Celanese rayon moire, drawn tightly to the rear and tied there by a bowknot, as featured in Harper's Bazaar for September.

While this haircut does not rank in historical importance with that Delilah gave Samson, it is nevertheless noteworthy because it brought two people into police court, cost them $25 each. Vernon Swan left a Milwaukee barber shop proud of the artistic job that had been done on his hair, wended to a near-by tavern to submit the trim to critical inspection of his friends. Oscar Meyer took full cognizance of the haircut, deliberated thoughtfully, gave this verdict: "Lousy." There was bedlam in the barroom which ended with both men in court and Swan with three artistic stitches embroidered in his newly shorn scalp.

It sounded like a new kind of golf they were playing on a considerably overpopulated course at Akron, Ohio. Sheriff Walter P. O'Neil, who happened by with five deputies, listened for the traditional word "fore." Instead he heard what sounded very much like "bingo." He investigated, found 6000 people gathered in a tent which was being mobbed like a nineteenth hole, stymied two $25 pots just as they were being handed out, arrests for gambling.

She Tries Hard ... But in Vain!

She tried to take care of her own hair, but it ended as so many cases have . . . a complete failure. Her hair does not have the luster that it should, it is lacking that appealing loveliness. Her hair is badly damaged, the ends are dry, it has been overbleached, and harmful chemicals have been used. Occasional visits to different shops, that take no personal interest in the patron, undoubtedly hindered instead of helped.

No Effort and Beautiful Hair

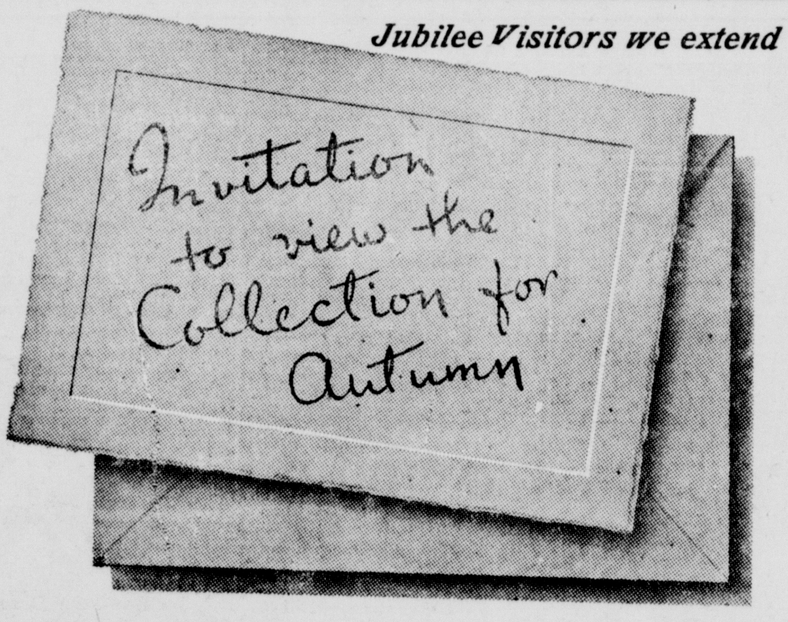

Now she is getting the full luster and charm that she deserves. She has regular appointments with The Tiny Beauty Salon, her hair is kept in wonderful condition. She now has that appealing loveliness in her hair that she had been lacking. Whether it be dinner, golf, riding, dancing, or tennis her hair is always in condition. Costs have been kept down in this home with the result that a popular model has been produced considerably below the $5,000 mark. The plan of this home follows a familiar pattern but not its costs. The Federal Housing Administration insured its mortgage of $3,300 after FHA officials had assigned the home a valuation of $4,250. The mortgage will be amortized over a period of twenty years during which time the monthly payments will amount to only $22.44, exclusive of taxes and hazard insurance. This home was built in Iowa.

How a British Diver Learned Secrets of Destroyed U-Boats

By Robert Randolph
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

One possible explanation of the recent successes of German submarines and the fact that relatively few of them have been reported destroyed is the report that the U-boats are able to muffle their engines so that the sound can't be picked up by the listening devices aboard anti-submarine craft.

During the last few years, the British Navy had reported it was obtaining great success in development and perfection of the crude hydrophones that were used toward the end of the World War for locating nearby submerged U-boats so they could be depth-bombed.

But the torpedoing of the aircraft carrier Courageous, which went have been screened by destroyers that should have picked up the noise of the U-boat's engines, indicates there may be something to the report that Germany has found a way to get around the hazard of listening devices.

U-BOAT SECRETS WELL KEPT

Submarines are closely guarded from prying eyes in times of peace. When battleships, cruisers and destroyers tie up at foreign ports, their officers welcome the visits of the foreign naval officers. But submarine officers are not "at home" to anyone but the men of their own navy and a few trusted civilians.

In the World War, virtually every one of the few German submarine that surrendered at sea was sunk by its crew before the captors could board it. Nevertheless, it was not long before the British Naval Intelligence Department Naval Intelligence Department began to show an amazingly accurate knowledge of the latest developments in U-boats, the movements of German warships, their signal codes and even the location of freshly-laid mine fields.

Not until several years after the war did it become generally known how the Admiralty obtained this information. The best diver in the navy had been picked to specialize in entering and searching U-boats as soon as possible after they were sunk in accessible waters. This man was E. C. Miller, and he may even be engaged in the same task now, since he was still in the British Navy a few years ago. During the World War he entered more than 60 sunken submarines for which he was decorated by the King in Buckingham Palace.

A BOAT PEOPLED BY THE DEAD

It was not until the second year of the World War that the Admiralty conceived the idea of sending a diver down to inspect a sunken submarine and find out what new gadgets and devices were in it. The boat was one sunk off the Kentish coast. Miller descended and squeezed through a jagged shell hole. His electric lamp disclosed a macabre scene. Salt water eels, some several feet long, and other inhabitants of the deep were feeding on the bodies of the crew. Attracted by the motion of the water as he moved through it, the bodies crowded about Miller, arms swinging about Miller, arms swing and eyes staring. He tied them to pipes, wheels and stanchions and went on with his checking. By accident he found the captain's strongbox.

Miller's commanding officer opened it and found three naval codes and a chart of a recently-laid mine field. This information was regarded as far more important than was Miller's report on the innovation he found in the U-boat. It gave the Admiralty the idea of organizing a special flying unit to rush Miller and his apparatus to any point off the British coast where a submarine was bagged.

If any U-boats have been sunk in accessible waters during the present war, it is certain that the British Admiralty has had its underwater intelligence men—possibly Miller himself—on the scene. The enemy's tomb will always yield something of value in the way of code books, gadgets, maps and papers in the clothing of dead officers.

FLOYD GIBBONS' BODY BACK TO WASHINGTON FOR FUNERAL RITES

Stroudsburg, Pa., Sept. 26.—Floyd Gibbons, whose travels as a war correspondent took him to the far corner of the globe, started on his last journey today—a trip in death to Washington, his former home.

The 52-year-old reporter with the white eye patch was planning to go abroad to cover the European War when heart disease killed him Sunday night at his farm near here.

Gibbons' brother, Edward T. of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Theodore Mayer, of Newton Centre, Mass., arrived yesterday to accompany the body to Washington. Funeral services will be at Dahlgren Temple, Georgetown University, 10 a. m., tomorrow and burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

ONE OF A SERIES OF ADVERTISEMENTS ON MEN WHO MAKE MISSOURI

"Yep~Bill And 2100 Other Druggists Helped Make Missouri!"

A FINE citizen—Bill or Bob or Ben—the Druggist in your community. He is representative of more than 2100 retail druggists in Missouri.

Bill's job doesn't end with supplying your needs for cigarettes, soft drinks and a thousand and one other items 16 to 24 hours a day. As a prescription pharmacist he stands as a safeguard to the health of your family and community. Dependent upon his knowledge, accuracy and skill, life or death frequently is in the balance.

Under the sign of the mortar and pestle, the druggists of Missouri have pioneered in the development of our state since the days of Daniel Boone. In those days he was known as the village apothecary, whose shop was distinguished by the once familiar vials of colored water. The druggist shares honors with the doctor in preserving the health of the community through intelligent, untiring and efficient service. He has always been a foremost citizen.

Today—with the constant advance of the medical profession—the druggists' responsibilities and duties have been greatly increased. He fills a position of added confidence and importance in the community—as a man to whom the public looks constantly for advice and competent attention to their needs. His watchword is "service."

We—your electric, gas and water companies of Missouri—are proud to have so much in common with your druggist. You are accustomed to drop in to his store or to call him at almost any hour, and you have learned to take it for granted that he will be there on the job at your service.

That is our objective, too. Twenty-four hours every day, year in and year out, we see to it that you can press an electric switch, turn a gas valve or a water faucet and find us on the job. We like, too, our kinship with your druggist as a local citizen. He is a part of your community, he is a public servant, he is a taxpayer. And so, too, your public utility companies help share the taxes of city, county, state and nation, help in every worth while community activity and help make every Missouri town a better place to live.

So, your druggist and his local fellow merchants and your utility companies have joined hands in making life safer and more pleasant.

UNUSUAL FACTS REVEALED

—by "Movie Spotlight"

BREWERS ACCUSED OF FRAUD IN MISSOURI

Jefferson City, September 25.—State Liquor Supervior Walker Pierce acted today to curb what he termed "a fraud on the public" by some brewers doing business in Missouri.

Pierce said his inspectors had discovered that some beer being shipped into the state bearing the 5 per cent labels in reality had an alcoholic content of less than 3.2 per cent.

A letter to all brewers licensed in Missouri warned that samples of beer suspected of being less than 3.2 per cent by weight would be analyzed and if the department's suspicions were borne out the brewer would be cited to show cause why his license should not be revoked.

Pierce also warned wholesalers that sales of liquor in large quantities to persons holding beer licenses would not longer be tolerated.

A new regulation effective October 15 will permit beer and liquor sales in any quantity provided it is not for resale. Dealers will be required to report all such sales over five gallons to the supervisor and to keep a record of all such sales for two years.

LAMAR CITIZENS PROTEST CLARK'S ARM STAND

Lamar, Mo., Sept. 25.—Fred D. Hays, a Lamar war veteran, circulated a petition denouncing Senator Bennett Clark's stand on the neutrality bill. The petition was presented and read to 240 persons.

Two hundred and thirty-two promptly signed it. Eight refused. The signers included a majority of the business and professional men of Lamar, county officers and citizens of all classes.

Many women signed the petition, which was a copy of a telegram sent tonight to Clark. The message read:

Senator Bennett Clark, Washington, .D. C.:

It is not interest in either France or England that prompts this message. But we can't forget that if the Allies are overwhelmed, more than a hundred islands on our own coast fall to Germany. These include the Bahamas, the Bermudas, the Windward Islands, the Leeward Islands, Jamaica and Trinidad. Then there is British Guiana, on the South American continent. The possession of these islands would make the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean a German lake, wrest from us the control of the Panama canal and give Hitler a thousand fields from which his bombing planes, practically at the water edge of our southeastern coast, could menace the very existence of this country. How can you believe if Germany wins, we can keep out of a terrible, bloody and perhaps hopeless war? You did all you could in the last session to hamstring and oppose any strengthening in the country's defense. Why not make amends to your country by voting to allow us to use our international rights and furnish much needed supplies to the Allies that might enable them to win and thus preserve this country, without the necessity of its going to war, from coming under the shadow of Hitler's mighty power in case he conquers at present, thus paving the way for a bloody and terrible defensive war upon our own soil, with all of the agony and ruin visited upon millions of our own people?

A "Cub" sportplane is now on the market as a pontoon seaplane. The ship is a deluxe, two passenger plane selling for less than $2000, and is powered with a 65 horsepower motor.

Washington Comment

If anyone had a bomb-throwing or disturbance program worked out for the opening of Congress, the enterprise was nipped in the early bud. It would be putting it mildly to say that the police had the situation well in hand. Admission was by pass, presented at well guarded barriers that were pig-tight, horse-high and bull-strong. The statement of the Declaration of Independence that all men are created equal, was given full force and effect. Those accustomed to occupy the seats of the mighty, got in if they could prove themselves. Otherwise they had to be satisfied with the autumnal beauty of the capitol grounds.

When other means of entrance failed, resort was had to the root of all evil. Ten dollar bids for passes failed to produce results, and served only to demonstrate that the demand was greater than the supply. Inside, a chair was a luxury. Foreign ministers, diplomats, and persons of domestic prominence, did not consider it beneath their dignity to accept a seat on the gallery stairs. On the floor there was the usual exchange of greetings, the heartiness of which was in no wise impaired by the fact that the legislators had parted company but a few short weeks before.

Despite the preliminary din, and the applause that greeted the arrival of the President, and now and then necessitated a pause in the delivery of his address, the assembly was soberly attentive and serious. It seemed to be realized that grave business lay ahead. The general trend of Mr. Roosevelt's message of course was a foregone conclusion: the replacing of the arms embargo by the cash and carry plan. Beyond that, and as to details, the President would forbid war credits to belligerent nations: war areas should be determined, which commercial American ships may not enter: wide authority to prevent American citizens from entering danger zones and travelling in vessels of belligerent nations is desirable: those who buy munitions of war here must acquire full title to the property before it leaves the dock. The speech who were made the target of a bitter dislike went to the tomb by the orderly processes of nature. The killing of Lincoln was hardly more than the result of a brain storm. The slayers of Garfield and McKinley, though tried and found sound of mind, probably would have been lodged in asylums for the criminal insane, had the victims been of less consequence and service to the land at large. Premier Calinescu of Rumania came to his end through a typical political assassination, alleged by the murderers to be the work of an elaborately constructed organization and probably so in fact. Speaking of organization, the dead Premier's government made a good showing: nine participants in the crime were executed according to law and before midnight, for a killing that took place after lunch hour of the same day.

There is plenty of good advice to the effect that we should not get involved in a European war. One might go further and remark that we ought not to become involved in too elaborate a consideration of it. Up to the time that the first German soldier stepped over into Poland, the papers gave us to understand that solving our own problems was a taxing job. Surely, the war over there cannot have wiped out all our difficulties at home.

occupied a full half-hour.

Democratic members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee who are backing the policy of the Administration, assembled to determine how the desires of the White House can be put into operation most advantageously. Opponents of the cash and carry were quite as active. More than a score of them met in the office of Senator Johnson to sketch out a campaign. The public naturally was not taken into confidence, but it is known that the oppositionists are determined to fight to the last ditch.

Assassinations for political reasons have been rare in the United States. Few men in public life have been hated more sincerely by some of their enemies than Mr. Bryan on the Democratic side, and Mr. Hoover on the Republican: but Mr. Bryan and many others

An Apple a Day Does Keep Doctor Away

THERE'S more to the adage, "An Apple a Day Keeps the Doctor Away," than is generally believed. Any normal child should keep healthy the year round if he receives his daily quota of fruits and vegetables, the "protective foods," writes Dr. Walter H. Eddy, director of Good Housekeeping Bureau, in the October issue.

It is an established fact that both fruits and vegetables contain the important vitamin C, which gives the greatest resistance to scurvy. But returning to the apple, it may not be well known that it thwarts the development of hostile bacteria in the intestinal tract and combats diarrheal diseases and constipation, says Dr. Eddy. In addition, the apple supplies part of the basic minerals which the body requires daily.

Dr. Eddy has drawn up the following chart which shows the amount of fruits and vegetables required weekly to protect a child's health.

	Tomatoes and Citrus Fruits	Green Leafy and Yellow Vegetables	Dried Fruits	Other Vegetables and Fruits
Child under 4 yr.	1.5 lbs	1.5 lb.	3 lb.	1 lb.
Boy 4-6; girl 4-7	1.5	1.5	4	1
Boy 7-8; girl 8-10	1.5	2.0	6	2
Boy 9-10; girl 11-14	1.75	2.0	8	2
Boy 11-12; girl over 12	1.75	2.0	8	2
Active boy 13-15	2.0	2.0	12	2

FUMIGATE STORED GRAINS

Weevils are working on stored wheat, peas, barley, and other stored grains; they will continue to work until cool weather unless something is done to stop them.

Treatment with carbon disulfide is not very expensive and will be rather successful if done properly. It should be carried out immediately before cool temperatures set in. Best results will be had when fumigation is carried out while the grain is 70° or higher. The amount to use will depend on the tightness of the bin, but the usual dosage requires ten to twelve pounds of the chemical for each 1000 cubic feet of bin space. The material is somewhat dangerous to use and one should keep all persons, animals, and fire away from the building when treatment is being carried on. The grain should be exposed to the chemical for 36 to 48 hours, after which the building should be aired thoroughly by opening all doors and windows for a few hours. The fumigant may be poured directly on the grain or exposed in shallow pans. Milling qualities of the grain nor germination will not be affected if the treatment is carride out properly. U. S. D. A. Bulletins dealing with corn and wheat torage under the Ever Normal Grainary Plan have brief discussions of this subject.

Of the 2000 known kinds of bacteria and germs, only about 100 are thought to be harmful to mankind. The other 1900 varieties are necessary to life in one way or another.

A "Cub" sportplane is now on the market as a pontoon seaplane. The ship is a de luxe, two passenger plane selling for less than $2000, and is power with a 65 horsepower motor.

You have got to hand the boquet to Milburn Arbaugh when it comes to doing things. He was selected as general manager of the Jubilee arrangements and up to Wednesday morning had sold 59 of the 60 booths in the big tent in Railroad Park. He has superintended the erection of all entertainment platforms and should be given a vote of thanks by the balance of the Jubilee committee for taking this responsibility off their shoulders.

It certainly pays to advertise. Last week we printed a paragraph about the so-called rye bread offered on the Sikeston markets and wished for a loaf of old-fashioned 100 per cent rye bread. In the mail Tuesday morning came a loaf of real rye bread from the Wagner bakery at Jackson, Mo. We don't know who sent it but it was just the thing for an old stomach for which we thank the sender. And in the afternoon mail another loaf of the real article made under the supervision of Mayor Smith of Kansas City in one of the bakeries that he owns in that city was received. We are now eating rye bread three times a day as long as it lasts. I'll say it pays to advertise.

Gore, Sr., Now Faces Charge Of Murder

Dr. George W. Gore, Sr., whose son faces a murder charge at Benton, Ill., in the slaying of the physician's wife, finds himself accused of murder in the street shooting of Carl Choisser, Benton publisher and attorney for the younger Gore.

Choisser was fatally wounded Monday by a man that stepped from behind a telephone pole on the public square and fired three shots in his stomach.

The elder Gore claimed he shot the attorney, related to the Gores by marriage, in self-defense. Officers said the doctor had disagreed with Choisser over the handling of the case of George Gore, Jr., who must go to trial Oct. 16 for the shooting of his step-mother.

In an oral confession, since repudiated, the son said he killed second wife of his father and afterward spent the night at a Sikeston hotel.

NEW BOOKS FOR RENTAL LIBRARY

The following short sketches are thumbnail impressions of a number of new additions to the rental library.

"Watch for the Dawn", by Stuart Cloete. The plot is centered about the hopeless struggle of the free Boers against English domination in South Africa. Young Kasper van der Berg is a hunted man because he has killed an English soldier and has many thrilling adventures in his wild flight from the consequences.

"Children of God", by Vardis Fisher. This long novel history of the Mormans is crowded with action. Beginning in New York where young Joseph Smith was accepted as a prophet, it tells of the migration of the sect from Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and Missouri, and of its final settlement in Utah. The character of Brigham Young as portrayed by the author is unforgetable.

"The Arrogant History of White Ben", by Clemence Dane. The realistic story of a towering figure who leaves supremacy in an English upland to become a world dictator. The action takes place after a World War in the 1950's.

"Black Narcissus", by Rumer Godden. The Anglican sisters of St. Mary make a brave struggle to establish a mission and to carry on work successfully among the primitive hill people in Tibet. The various reactions of the sisters to the climate, isolation, and lack of conveniences make an interesting psychological study while the vivid descriptions of the Tibetan landscape lend glamor to the story.

"Breakneck Brook", by Margaret Flint. The story of a pretty girl who preferred like on a farm to college and a job in the city. The dignified and occasionally humorous narrative is set in the hills of Maine.

"Ararat", by Elgin Croseclose. This book will hold a special appeal to those who enjoyed Werfel's "Forty Days of Musa Dagh". Amos Lyle, Texas cowhand, turned missionary, devotes his life to the Armenians in Turkey and flees with them to Russia during the Turkish massacres in 1895. Failing in Russia to build a permanent Armenian settlement he decides to dedicate his life to helping destitute children.

First 1939 Price Adjustments Paid In Madrid County

The first 1939 price adjustment payments on cotton in New Madrid county were received Thursday of the past week and the first corn payments on Monday of this week, according to County Agent Broom. There were 336 checks were received for the total amount of $29,185.35. Corn payments, 138 checks, amounted to $3,393.27. Although this is only a small portion of the total, other checks should come in rather rapidly from now on, it is believed by Chairman Samuel L. Binford.

Also, he points out that this is the first time that payments have been received the same year in which they are due. This is due perhaps to several factors—more office space has been made available, a more efficient office force, better understanding of the program by the people themselves, and the program is being continued pretty well along the same generla lines.

So far there have been no material changes made in the 1940 program; therefore, probably all payments will be received during the current year rather than being delayed as in the past. Probably one of the things which has contributed more is the understanding and cooperation of the people themselves, the county agent said.

'Big Time' Football Has an Evening on S. H. S. Field

Those extra-hardy football fans who follow the game even during week-day practice sessions rubbed their eyes and looked again after arriving at the Sikeston High School field Tuesday afternoon.

On the field was not only the Bulldogs but a gang of huskies in red, white and blue helmets that looked like they might be ready to go up against anything from a university on down.

They were big time—St. Mary's University of San Antonio, Tex., working out on the local field.

En route to play Xavier University at Cincinnati, O., Friday night, they ran into some unexpected difficulties when the gas line of their big bus broke 14 miles south of Sikeston. A wrecker towed the disabled carrier to this city, but it was found replacement part must be secured from Buffalo, N. Y. So in the meantime, under the guidance of Head Coach J. C. "Mose" Simms, Line Coach Jim Smith and Backfield Coach Doug Locke, the squad gave the crowd an extra dish of footballistics.

No slow-starters, these. Already they had played two games and won them both. Edward Collignon, chairman of the faculty committee on athletics, said the team defeated the University of San Francisco on the West Coast a week ago Sunday, 7-6, and last Friday ran through Daniel Baker College of Brownwood, Tex., a Texas Conference team, 27-0. After Xavier, the San Antonio team will swing around to take on the University of Toledo.

The squad of 29 and remainder of the party left their school Sunday afternoon. After a workout Monday at North Little Rock, Ark., they intended to scrimmage Tuesday evening against the Cape Teachers, but the bus had other plans.

The group had expected to arrive in Cincinnati Wednesday evening, the same time they left here after chartering a Greyhound bus. A man was left behind to bring the school's bus to Cincinnati when it is fixed.

The Senior Class met Tuesday afternoon and selected their rings from four samples taken from Sikeston jewelry stores. The ring chosen is of a standard design, showing the Sikeston Bulldog.

Eight members of the faculty of Sikeston High School attended a Scott-Mississippi County Teacher's Association meeting at Fornfelt, Monday evening, Sept. 25. After the meeting, which was held in the basement of the Methodist Church, supper was served to the members by the ladies of the church.

Dean Vest C. Meyers of the Southeast Missouri Teacher's College was the speaker of the evening. The meeting was held for the purpose of forming a community teacher's association. Since Sikeston has enough teachers to form a community association within itself, she did not enter this association.

NEWS EVENTS OF SOUTH GRADE SCHOOL

The sixth grade English classes have been given a list of required books to be read during the year. The list contains names of 35 books from which any 12 may be selected for reading.

Antone Lanier has enrolled in the sizth grade as a new pupil. She formerly attended school at Osceola, Ark.

The third and fourth grade library of 250 volumes is ready for use. We are very proud of our library, which was started last year, and hope to make it larger and better.

The childrne in Miss Chaney's room have started a unit in social studies about homes. This includes the homes of long ago and the homes of children in different lands around the world.

Mrs. Davis' second graders have been studying the different ways of traveling. One of the results is several pasteoard airplanes, trains, boats, autos and busses which were made by the class.

HEALTH INTERVIEWS

Mrs. Poe, the school nurse, with the aid of Mrs. S. Bloomfield, Mrs. D. Taylor, Mrs. W. P. Wilkerson and Mrs. Hirschberg, members of the P.-T. A., have been interviewing the mothers of the beginners for "health histories" this lat week and making arrangements for each to have a physical examination by their family physicians. Response has been very good. At the present time 50 per cent of the mothers have cooperated. A few of the children had already had the examination made before school started. Mrs. Poe wishes to call attention to the "Nine Point Health Program" and urges everyone to help in order to increase the list of nine-point pupils this year. Last year the school had 114 pupils who received the nine-point awards.

BOY MEETS DOG

A most happy reunion of boy and dog was witnessed Monday morning by the first grade children and their teacher, Miss Jewell Mouser, when J. F. Cox III was finally found by his devoted little bulldog. The dog had been searching frantically, from room to room, for his master and both he and J. F. were overjoyed to see each other. "Skippy" was allowed to visit in J. F.'s room and to participate in the football game at recess.

Bulldogs to Open Against East Prairie

Coach Vernon Green will take his string of Sikeston Bulldogs to East Prairie this Friday night for their opening fling against Coach Hugh May's boys.

Inexperienced for the most part and very light in spots, the Sikeston team is something of a question mark—much depends on capacity of the opposition. Should any casualties occur, Coach Green will be hard put to find replacements of the size and ability to fill in. The second string that has been scrimmaging against the first is very light indeed.

Little is known of the East Prairie team save that it dropped a game last Friday to Ste. Genevieve, 14-6. Hence, the Mississippi County team will be a game ahead of Sikeston in experience.

As East Prairie is in the South Division of the SEMO conference, it will be a non-conference game.

The opening kickoff is scheduled for 7:30 p. m.

The corn will be shucked, weighed, and left at the ends of the rows so that everyone may have opportunity to observe the corn and stalks both. Also, information will be provided as to the stand, leaning stalks and ears per stalk.

TIN HORN SCRIBE IN MO. URGES BOSSES TO IGNORE WAGNER LABOR ACT

Sikeston, Mo.—A tin horn scribe in this town of 6,000 in Southeast Missouri aimed his little popgun at labor but missed and tore a hole in civil liberties. Writing in a recent issue of a local shee, the t. h. s. whined:

"Our merchants and other interested parties should keep their ears to the ground and eyes wide open to see that union organizers out of Cape Girardeau do not hold another meeting in Sikeston in a attempt to organize labor, mecanics and the unemployed . . ."

Following this the mutton head lost all control and advised local employers to bear down on labor and "persuade them to have nothing to do with the agitators."

Well! Well! The little man certainly shoved his neck out. Of course, it's a scrawny neck and hardly worth notice, but it might be well for the t. h. s. to study the case of Jersey City, N. J., in which a political giant, backed by municipal and state forces, offered similar advice and was clipped by the U. S. Supreme Court.

Employers in Siketon might also, and with profit, study the National Labor Relations Act which the tin horn scribe advises them to tear up.—Radio and Electric Union News, Washington, D. C.

The Catron Gilt Club, under the leadership of Earl Allstun, will exhibit purebred spotted Poland China gilts, while the Fairview Club, led by Lenzie Beck, will show purebred Duroc Jersey gilts.

The club members' gilts are in good condition and should make an interesting and worthwhile showing, according to assistant county agent Wm. C. Roberson.

New Missouri Road Plan Drawn

Jefferson City, September 26.—A new road program—embodying a 3-cent gasoline tax which sponsors claimed would provide $10,000,000 a year for road improvements—was laid before the State Highway Commission today.

A committee, headed by Judge E. S. Bond, Jefferson City, president of the Missouri County Judges' Association, presented the plan. Gov. Lloyd C. Stark was to have participated in the conference, but was attending the American Legion convention in Chicago.

Three-cent gasoline tax proposals—a penny boost—were beaten at the polls last year and again in this year's session of the Legislature.

ON POPULATIONS BASIS

The constitutional amendment which today's group would submit to the voters next year calls for:

A 1-cent increase in the 2 cents a gallon gasoline tax.

An equal division of the extra cent's proceeds between counties and cities, with all cities above 500 sharing on a population basis. (No plan for county distribution yet perfected.)

Abolition of city gasoline levies.

County Courts to take over administration of supplementary or farm-to-market roads, with the State Highway Department to concentrate on the present system of primary and secondary highways with its 2-cent tax yield.

INDORSED BY M. F. A.

The plan wsa drawn up by a group organized at Columbia last July and already has been indorsed by the Missouri Farmers' Association, whose president, William Hirth of Columbia, was among the eight committee members conferring with the commission.

Judge Bond said the 1-cent tax increase would yield an additional $6,000,000 a year, of which $3,000,000 would go to cities and the other $3,000,000 to counties. Typical counties would receive $15,000 to $30,000 a year, he estimated.

The plan's allocations to cities, the committee argued, would more than compensate them for the loss of their own tax, while county construction of supplementary roads would be "more satisfactory" and economical.

Senator Vandenberg, campaigning on two fronts—one objective being the Republican Presidential nomination, the other a defense movement to hang onto his job in the Senate in the not improbable event of the first objective failing— chose the neutrality issue as the text of his major political speech so far.

There has been a general expression of desire and hope to have partisan politics adjourned so far as possible, while the administration and the country and the country generally are concerned with the effort to keep us out of war, but the Michigan senator doesn't think that way. He told the country in effect that the complications and perils begotten of the European war were unimportant compared with the necessity of electing a Republican administration next year.

Senator Vandenberg was one of the Republican members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee who prevented the revision of the present embargo law during the closing days of the recent session of Congress. Every Republican on that committee voted the same way, Senator Borah insisting that because of some inside information he had he knew that there was no European war imminent. The result was to leave this country, when the declarations of war came on, with our hands tied, despite the nation-wide sentiment that any bill that gave an advantage to the totalitarian combatants was anything but advantageous to the United States of America. Incidentally it involved the call of an extra session of Congress, with the expense that involves, which is peculiar, to say the least, for a group to do that is clamoring for national economy.

POLITICS IN FULL SWING

But for the solid Republican vote in the Committee, we could have returned to the normal and historical attitude of America in regard to foreign trade without any fuss, for all that was sought was to permit any nation in the world trading with us provided it paid cash for what it bought and carried its purchases home in its own ships and at its own risk. Now, of course, the cry will go up that by the cash-and-carry plan we will be discriminating against those belligerents who cannot pay for what we have to sell or haven't the ships to get them home if they could pay.

Even the New York Herald-Tribune—chief among the assailants of the Roosevelt administration—answers Senator Borah's declaration that repeal of the embargo "will inevitably bring us into war" in this wise: "It seems pertinent to insist that the United States need not 'inevitably' be 'brought' into anything." Further says this anti-administration newspaper: "It should, we think, be recognized that to the extent (and it would be a very small extent at present) that repeal of the embargo operates to end an advantage which we are now giving Herr Hitler and to afford a corresponding advantage to the Allies, it would tend to incite the Germans to attack our trade. It does not follow that the attack would be made, that they could be made in any serious way, or that this country would be under any compulsion to resist them by declaring war."

Actually the administration's neutrality program is not a political issue—except to the professional Republican politicians. Steady-thinking members of that party like Nicholas Murray Butler, and former Secretary of State Stimson have declared the embago repeal not only wise but necessary.

If we didn't have it the embargo would shoot our international trade to pieces—even in the case of Canada, our best customer.

MAKING A PRECEDENT

So far as I can recall there is no instance in history where a big nation slaughtered its own commerce because its markets were available to one combatant country and not to another. Indeed it is no secret that had the measure revising the embargo act been permitted to go before the full Senate we would have the benefit of it now. Smothering the proceeding in Committee, settled nothing beyond giving the Republican member of that body and a few anti-administration Democrats the satisfaction of deferring something the President asked for.

As this letter is being written the cry is going up that the administration is planning cloture to prevent a full and free debate of the problem. Nobody in the administration has been mentioned cloture; nobody has even suggested that any curb be placed on discussion in the Senate. If, instead of an honest debate, the situation might have developed into a mere filibuster to prevent the Senate taking action—that is something the Senate and only the Senate could or would handle.

Actually the isue is simple and should not take a great deal of time in its presentation. Senators like Vandenberg, Borah and Nye contend that to remove the embargo puts us in peril of war. Those who favor the removal of the embargo contend that the so-called enactment encouraged the gangster powers to begin the war, because of the advantage these powers received by our restriction of the democracies' ability to buy what they needed from America and that the continuance of the embargo would be hostile and harmful to those whose struggle has the sympathy or nearly all Americans.

You may be sure that there would be no lengthy debate, let alone any filibuster over it, were it not for the circumstance that there is a Presidential election next year, so that the minority party spokesmen or hopeful candidates think it is of value to them to balk and try to discredit the Democratic adminitration.

Incidentally, it is the opinion of this humble commentator on political events, that Senator Vandenberg's speceh will not help him either in his ambition to become the Republican forlorn hope, or make it easier for him to remain a senator.

DRIVER RESPONSIBILITY

The captain of a ship is responsible for the welfare and the safety of every person on board. In time of danger or stress all hands look to him for guidance; should an accident occur, the captain is the last man to crawl into a lifeboat.

An airplane pilot is held accountable for the lives of all his passengers; and because this responsibility is so tremendous he employs all known safety devices. He carefully checks all atmospheric conditions prevailing over his route; he sees to it that his radio apparatus is in good working order; he makes sure that his plane is mechanically perfect. Only after these precautionary measures are attended to will an airplane pilot leave the ground.

An engineer on a train must know every inch—every curve and every angle—of his route before he is entrusted with the lives of hundreds of passengers. When holding the throttle he scrupulously follows intricate schedules and signals.

When, despite all precautions, disastrous accidents do occur involving either a ship, an airplane or a train, investigation begins immediately. Company officials and government agents rush to the scene of the accident, check up all possible data, and determine precisely the cause and effect. Thereafter all human efforts are bent on preventing similar tragedies.

But what about the automobile and the accidents it causes?

Every twenty-four hours, on an average, over one hundred persons are killed in gruesome automobile wrecks! In a like period, more than four thousand persons are injured in the same way! Should accidents involving a train, ship or plane cause such large loss of life it would be spectacular news—a tragedy that would horrify the nation.

Yet there is no such overwhelming sentiment aroused relative to automobile accidents. Why not? The key to mass inertia regarding traffic accidents lies in the fact that the general public takes the attitude "accidents are bound to happen; there is not much we can do to prevent them." Once the public comes to the realization that accidents are caused and do not just happen, and once the blame is placed on the proper person—the driver—we will see less needless bloodshed!

A great many motorists assume little or no personal responsibility. These foolish persons regard the automobile as a toy, failing to realize that it is really a ton or more of treacherous steel, ready to crush and mangle and kill at the slightest provocation. These same persons take unbelievable risks without so much as the flicker of an eyelash. Passing cars on hills and curves, speeding seventy or eighty or ninety miles per hour, disregarding stop signs—all these vicious practices are daily occurrences.

If the curse of such conduct were only on the head of the guilty driver, accidents would not always be so sad. But, many times, it is the innocent little wife, or the unsuspecting passenger in the back seat or the small children, who pay in the driver's stead—which doesn't seem fair!

Believe it or not, it's really a privilege to drive a car, a privileged granted only to the last generation. Before the advent of the automobile our grandfathers and great-grandmothers had to travel by way of the inconvenient and slow-moving buggy, wagon or horse. They never dreamed that any conveyance as beautiful, as comfortable, or as swift as an automobile would come into existence. Really, the man who drives today is very fortunate, but he should remember that in equal proportion to his luck is his driving responsibility.

Crocheted Hats Economical and Smart

SIGNING IS NOT "JUST A FORMALITY"

Sometimes salesmen say that signing your name to a paper is "just a formality." Never be misled by such a statement—you may be signing a legally binding contract. For your own protection read what you are signing, refuse to sign unless the document is filled in according to the terms as you understand them, and keep a copy.

Remember, mortgages and notes are legal documents that can be acted upon with the aid of the courts. You cannot avoid the provision by stopping payments and letting the firms take back the goods. Firms may legally take back goods, sell them, and hold you responsible for the difference.

To be safe, insist that all agreements, guarantees, provisions for payments, etc., be in writing. Always follow the slogan—"Read Before You Sign," and "Keep a Copy".

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

The new 1940 automobiles have been provided with a complete new unit of lighting.

The new equipment is known as "The Sealed Beam Headlight System." No dirt, dust or moisture can penetrate the sealed unit to corrode the reflecting surfaces and lens. More light, properly distributed is thrown on the road surfaces.

The new lamps throw two light beams. The lower beam is for city driving and the top beam for country driving.

These light will provide more protection and greater safety after dark on the nation's streets and highways.

TO KEEP FISH WHITE

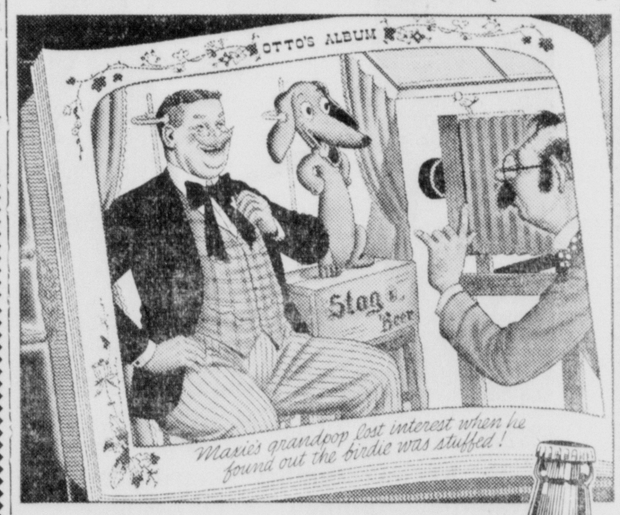

Boiled fish will stay white if a little lemon juice is added to the water in which it is cooked, and the acid also helps in keeping the fish from falling apart in cooking. Boil fish slowly and time it carefully so as not to overcoko it. Tie the fish in a piece of cheesecloth or a piece of clean muslin or place it in a steamer for cooking.

American Indians used totem poles for tombstones as well as for idols. Ashes of cremated braves were placed in the poles.

A Friend in the Kitchen

By Hermine Crawford

One and all, the most distinguished physicians and food experts agree that the green leafy vegetables form one of the most important of the food groups—so important that everybody ought to eat a good sized helping of them every day. "But what can a body do?" says the distracted housekeeper. "They just won't eat spinach."

There are two things you can do. One si to look around and find other greens beside spinach. There are more kinds of greens common in this country, but not commonly appreciated, than there are days in the week. To be able to enjoy them all would mean a greatly enriched dietary as well as more pleasure in eating.

The other thing htat you can do is to learn how to cook spinach along with all the other greens, by the new, shotr-time methods, so they will not only have a chewable quality that makes a pleasant mouthful, but will look good enough to eat and taste as good as they look. It's a shame that such valuable leaves as kale and cabbage are so often rejected as strong juiced, coarse, smelly foods. It was the old, long-time cookery that developed those rank flavors and reduced the curled leaves that went into the pot so crisp and green, to a dark pulp. Cooked the new way, these same leaves come to the table as a really decorative dish, and fresh and green, each with its own rich, yet delicate, flavor—and no offensive odors hovering over the household. I prefer the waterless methods for practically all vegetables. Not only are none of the valuable elements lost by the waterless method in the discarded water, but it seems to me that it gives a les swatery, fuller-flavored result.

Once the two quick cookery methods, as described for cabbage, are mastered, they can be used for practically all vegetables. But th etime required will vary according to the variety and tenderness of the vegetables.

WATERLESS METHOD FOR CABBAGE

Cut the stem down to the leaves and remove all decayed or unsightly parts of leaves. Let the cabbage stand in cold water for 15 minutes. Then rinse and drain. Cut into pieces about the size for slaw or a little larger. Transfer cabbage to a heavy utensil that has a tight fitting cover. Add one tablespoon of boiling water. Cover and cook until steam has begun to form and the cooking proces shas started. Now, turn the heat low enough to just keep the pot steaming. Continue cooking 10 minutes, more or less, according to tenderness of the cabbage and your own preference.

If much steam escapes, you may have to add another tablespoon of boiling water to prevent burning, but that will not be necessary if the utensil is tight.

Season with salt and butter and stir the cabbage about in the pot to gather up and blend in any liquid that may remain in the bottom. Then turn out everything in the pot and serve immediately. I sometimes cut fine a red sweet pepper or a canned pimento into the pot with the cabbage. It gives the dish a festive air and adds considerably to its nutritive value.

Clean, soak, rinse and drain as for waterless method. For the quick-boiling method, it is better to leave all vegetables in as large pieces as practicable in order to reduce to a minimum the loss of valuable elements from the cut surfaces into the water which is discarded. Have a large pot more than half full of rapidly boiling, salted water(enough water to more than cover the cabbage.) Plunge the cabbage into the water and boil rapidly. Then cover and adjust the heat to continue boiling. Very tender, young cabbage will be edibly tender in five minutes. An older, or tougher variety may take from 10 to 12 minutes.

When done, lift the cabbage from the water with a slit spoon and drain. Transfer to a hot vegetable dish, season with melted butter and serve.

The big, unbroken, bright green segments make an unusually inviting vegetable, one a good many people have actually never seen before.

For an unusual flavor, try cooking the leafy tops of celery in the pot with the cabbage.

Kale, if not too large, should be left in bunches to prevent loss from cut surfaces, and left immersed in cold water for 10 minutes. Then lift out of the water, rinse through several waters, until free of all sand. Shake free of most of the water and then strip the leaves from the spines. The leaves can then be cooked by either method.

Chard, prepare as directed for kale.

Spinach, Mustard and other small leaved varieties, are best washed in bunches and the leaves then cut from the bunch.

Brussels Sprouts should be left whole. But he sure to scrape and clean the heads, cut off the toughest of the butt ends, and soak in cold water for at least 10 minutes.

Broccoli cooks best when the tender, young flowerettes are cut from the stems. Cook the tougher leaves and stems for about five minutes and then add the flowerettes. In this way all become tender at the same time and no part is overcooked.

String Beans vary in size and tenderness, and the method of preparation varies accordingly. If very small and tender, they can be cooked whole, by the quick-boiling method. Larger and older beans are best "Frenched" (cut lengthwise in small pieces like shoe-string potatoes) and cooked by the waterless method. Ten minutes will turn the trick and the beans retain their bright green color.

There is a smart little cutter on the market that is just right for Frenching string beans and other vegetables.

1 pound green string beans
2 medium sized onions, chopped
1 tablespon chopped parsley
6 tablespoon butter
1 tablespon lemon juice
Salt and pepper

Inspect beans and remove strings; cook in boiling water and drain. Melt half the butter. Add onions and cook until a delicate brown. Add beans and seasonings. Saute five minutes. Add remaining butter, lemon juice and parsley. Serve at once.

The time required for the quick cooking of all vegetables varies so much according to their condition of tenderness, that I cannot gvie a set table even for my own preferneces. By the waterless method, spinach reaches the edibly tender stage in from five to 10 minutes after steaming begins. Chard and mustard take considerably longer. Brussels sprouts and broccoli usually require from 15 to 20 minutes. And remember, the shorter the time required to reach the edible stage, the better the dish.

TO SELECT GREEN VEGETABLES

Never take a wilted leaf if you can help it. It may freshen in cold water, but will never be as good as a fresh, crisp leaf. The diqerent varieties may be light or dark in color, but they should always be a bright, fresh green.

In selecting cabbage, look out for the brown, decayed leaf edges that sometimes fold inward through entire head. Test the tenderness of broccoli with the thumb-nail on the stems and look for bright colored leaves.

Sizes is a fairly reliable indication of the age of a string bean, but some varieties grow materially larger than others. Test for crispness by "snapping" one for a sample.

Very young and tender green leaves are good eaten raw. When preparing such vegetables as kale or spinach, it is a good idea to lay aside a few of the small center leaves to be crisped in the refrigerator. They make a decorative addition to the nutritive elements of a salad or appetizer and may be used as a garnish.

Tomato and Corn Are Fine for Fall

Fine feasting for Fall menus is this fat platterful of tomato and corn scramble. To make it thicken a cup and a half of milk with a flour and butter roux, using three tablespoons each. Season with a dash of salt and pepper, then add a cup of succulent fresh cooked corn cut from the cob, or an equal portion of canned whole kernel corn. Spoon in a cup of fluffy shreddel American cheese and stir gently until the sauce is smooth and the flavors are all merged. For a final fillip of fine flavor add a third of a cup of rosy, ruddy tomato ketchup to give extra zip and zing to the dish. Served on crisp toast straws with a bowl of mixed vegetable salad and a relish dish of fresh cucumber pickle and ripe olives, this makes mighty good eating for the main course of an Autumn meal.

Clever cooks nowadays contrive to keep a bottle of ketchup handy on their spice shelves near the stove to give extra snap and savor to their cokoing. A liberal dash of this rosy, ruddy colored condiment is guaranteed to tone up a temperate dish with distinction. Try spicing a barbecue sauce with this old-fashioned kettle kitchup for hamburger patties. A serving of ketchup to perk up a platterful of pepers stuffed with sausage meat and macaroni. And it's guaranteed good eating when you add tart tomato ketchup in making a crimson creole sauce for shrimp or veal. Why not try your hand at this clever ketchup cookery using these savory recipes for a starter?

BARBECUED PATTIES

Combine thoroughly
½ lb. ground round steak
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
½ cup soft bread crumbs
¼ cup milk

Form meat into patties, then brown on both side in two tablespoons fat. Combine, then pour over meat.

1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon pure cider vinegar
½ cup tomato ketchup

Cover and simmer slowly about 10 to 15 minutes, or until sauce is thick. Serve hot between heated or toasted bun halves. (Makes six.)

PEPPERS STUFFED TO PERFECTION

Cut tops from six medium sized green peppers. Remove seeds and fiber, then drop into boiling water. Remove from fire and let stand 10 minutes. Drain. Fry one pound sausage meat, crumbling into small bits with a fork. Combine meat with one medium (17-ounce) can cooked macaroni in cream sauce with cheese, one-third cup tomato ketchup. Stuff peppers with sausage mixture, then place in casserole and surround with a few tablespoons water to prevent sticking. Sprinkle tops of peppers with soft bread crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 45 minutes.

COCKTAIL SAUCE

Combine, blending thoroughly.
½ cup tomato ketchup
2 tablespoons chili sauce
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon horseradish

Chill. Serve over crab meat or other sea food cocktails.

SHRIMP WITH CREOLE SAUCE

Melt two tablespoons butter. Add, blending well, two tablespoons flour. Cook until bubbling. Add one medium (16-ounce) can chicken gumbo (creole) soup. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. All one-third to one-half cup tomato ketchup, two cups shrimps. Continue heating slowly until shrimps are heated through. Serve in a macaroni ring or over toast. The ketchup and soup give this dish a real old-fashioned creole flavor. (Serves four to six.)

VEAL CREOLE

Brown well on both sides four medium veal cutlets in four tablespoons butter or drippings. Season with salt and pepper. Add one-half cup (one medium) finely chopped onion, three-fourths cup green pepper, one bunch young carrots, cut in halves. Combine, then pour over meat and vegetables one-half cup tomato ketchup, one cup warm water. Cover and cook slowly 45 minutes. If necessary, thicken the sauce with a small amount of flour blended with melted butter.

CHOW MEIN

Cut the meat from 1½ pounds lean pork chops. Put the bones in a saucepan and add cold water to just cover. Cover the pan and cook slowly for 1 hour, then strain off the broth. Melt 2 tablespoons bacon drippings in a pan, add the pork cut in small pieces and fry until slightly browned. Add 1 cup sliced celery, ½ cup sliced onions, 1 cup sliced water chestnuts (these may be bought canned), 2 tablespoons Chinese soy sauce and the pork stock. Cover and simmer or boil gently for 20 minutes. Add 1 teaspoon sugar and 2 tablespoons cornstarch mixed with a little cold water. Let boil up to thicken and serve over mound of hot fried noodles. Chow mein noodles may be bought in cans ready to heat in the oven and use. Garnish each serving of chow mein with shredded egg, made by frying a beaten egg in a large frying pan so that it spreads out very thin. Cool and cut in shreds.

No longer will Swedish newlyweds have to remove rice from their hair and clothes aftre a marriage ceremony. Church authorities, pointing out that rice is an important article of food, suggested brides and grooms be showered with something not edible—like rose petals.

EXCLUSIVE IN 1940 OLDSMOBILE

The clutch and clutch pedal have been entirely eliminated in the 1940 Oldsmobiles equipped with the new "Hydra-Matic Drive." With this sensational device, exclusive to Oldsmobile, all the driver has to do is step on the accelerator, steer and stop. Photo shows the front compartment of an Oldsmobile equipped with "Hydra-Matic Drive."

A car that has no clutch or clutch pedal! A car that is capable of "thinking" and acting for itself to the extent of shifting gears automatically back and forth through four speed ranges! A car which needs only the use of accelerator pedal, brake and steering wheel to control it in 99 per cent of all driving! A car with a motor which cannot stall, and which responds with all the flexibility of electricity or steam!

In the most sensational announcement made in the automotive industry in years, Oldsmobile claims these advantages through their new Hydra-Matic Drive, which will be available on all three series cars which Olds is offering for 1940. The new drive is the product of eight years of intensive work by the Oldsmobile engineering staff, and it will be manufactured for Olds by a newly created division of General Motors in a special $3,000,000 plant in Detroit. It will be an exclusive Oldsmobile feature for 1940.

"Hydra-Matic Drive simplifies car control so amazingly that we believe it will mark as decisive an advance in car design as did the electric self-starter or four wheel brakes," says N. E. Fuchs, Jr., general manager of The Semo Motor Co.

"Briefly, it consists of a liquid flywheel combined with a fully automatic transmission, which is the outgrowth of the automatic safety transmission brought out by Olds more than two years ago. The liquid flywheel when combined with the automatic transmission eliminates the mechanical clutch and achieves many things that have been sought for years by automotive engineers.

The simpliciyt, flexibility and freedom from wear inherent in the liquid flywheel have been common knowledge among engineers for 5& year, but not until the perfection of this automatic transmission has it been possible to take full advantage of them.

"Most noticeable simplification of driving controls in a car equipped with Hydra-Matic Drive, is of course the absence of a clutch pedal. The left foot has no other duty than to control the headlight beam button in night driving. The right foot controls the accelerator and foot brake as in the past. Under the steering wheel is a lever, with four positions indicated on a quadrant, indicating "Neutral", "High", "Low" and "Reverse".

"To start the car moving and get away, just four operations are required. Turn the ignition key, step on the starter, move the lever under the wheel from "Neutral" to "High" position, step on the accelerator, and the car moves forward smoothly, changing its own gears through first, second, and third, until at 23 miles an hour, it enters fourth speed, a direct drive with a rear axle of 3.6 to 1. The whole process requires exactly a dozen fewer operations by the driver than with a standard clutch and transmisison. Virtually all driving is done with the lever in "High" position. "Low" is used only in deep sand or mud or in climbing or descending an extremely steep hill, where it is desired to keep the car in low gear.

"Thus, merely the pressure of the foot on the accelerator controls a speed range from a mile an hour to full throttle. If quick acceleration is needed to pass slower moving vehicles on the road, it is only necessary to press the accelerator all the way down, and instantly the gear changes from fourth to third, or "pick-up" gear, which is the equivalent of a rear axle radio of 5.25 to 1. Partially releasing the accelerator returns the gear to fourth.

"Most striking, however, is the demonstration of flexibility afforded by the performance of Hyda-Matic Drive on a hill. The new Olds can be driven up a hill at a snail's pace, and even stopped on the steepest hill without using the brake. By slightly depressing the accelerator the car can be held by the power of the motor partially applied through the liquid flywheel. Nor will this result in any injury or wear. From such a dead stop, the car will climb smoothly on up the hill by merely giving it more gas. And there is no possibility of stalling the motor.

"The sort of performance on a hill is made possible by the extraordinary advantages of the liquid flywheel, teamed up with automatic gear changing, as compared with amanual shifting and use of a mechanical clutch. A comparison of the way the two devices operate is necessary to understand these advantages.

"With a mechanical clutch, engine power is applied gradually to the transmission and rear wheels by increasing the friction between two discs until they hold firmly. The slippage between these two discs cushions the shock of applying the engine power, and does it well or badly according to the skill of the driver, and the amount of wear the clutch has undergone. Since gradual application of power through a mechanical clutch depends upon friction—and friction inevitably means wear—the best mechanical clutch that can be made starts to wear out from the instant it is first engaged.

"But with the fluid coupling of the Hydra-Matic Drive, an entirely different principle is employed. Instead of the flat plates of the mechanical clutch, there are two rotors, resembling shallow steel basins, exactly identical in size and shape. Their concave surface are divided by vanes into exactly similar patterns. These rotors are mounted with concave surfaces facing, one thirty-second of an inch apart, one attached to the crankshaft of the engine, the other to the automatic transmission. Both are enclosed in a steel housing, filled with oil under pressure from the automatic transmission.

"When the engine is started, and the rotor attached to the crankshaft starts to revolve, oil from its vanes is thrown by centrifugal force against the vanes of the rotor attached to the transmission. With the engine idling, the force is small, not enough to move the car. The oil is "slipping" between the rotors. But the slipping oil is not like slipping clutch plates—there is no wear or injury. As the motor speed increases, the slip lessens, the rotor attached to the transmission begins to turn and the car gathers speed quickly and with amazing smoothness. At normal driving ranges the slip between the rotors is less than a quarter of one per cent—utterly negligible as far as car performance is concerned.

"The action of the rotors can be compared to that of two electric fans placed facing each other, one with power on, the other, off. The idle fan is quickly started to turning, too, by the force of air from the other.

"Another advantage of the liquid flywheel lies in the fact that torsional crankshaft vibration cannot be conveyed through its oil cushion to the transmission. Likewise the smooth application of power which it affords, means far less wear and strain on the rear axle gears.

"Because the driving and driven rotors are exactly alike, the engine can serve as a brake in decending hills or in any deceleration, just as it does with mechanical clutch and standard transmission. The action between the rotors is merely reversed, and the driving members becomes the driven. For normal deceleration, the control lever can be left in the "Hi" forward position and the foot removed from the accelerator. For more positive car control when descending steep grades, the control lever can be moved to "Lo" forward position which keeps the drive in first or second gear.

"Actually, about the only operations left for the driver of a car equipped with Hyda-Matic Drive are to steer, step on it and stop. We believe that it simplifies the control of a car literally to the last degree possible, and that it will by the same measure increase the safety and pleasure of motoring."

And here is the last fish story of summer. From a farm near Hot Springs, Ark., came James Sparkman with a tale of how his cow Sally waded into a pond to get relief from the heat. When she lumbered back to the barnyard a 6-pound bass was danging from her tail, caught in the hair. But the story was not too well authenticated. Only proof Sparkman could show skeptics was—his cow's tail.

★ FASHION PREVIEW ★

FALL fashions accentuate the figure: full bust, rounded hips, tiny waist. Nothing is hidden, as shown in Mainbocher's dress of pink and silver satin brocade, highlighted in September Harper's Bazaar.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS

Brussels sprouts have made a reappearance after a considerable absence. They need care in cooking to have them at their best. Wash the sprouts, remove any wilted or discolored leaves, and let soak in cold salted water for at least 30 minutes. Drain, cover with boiling water, add 1 teaspoon sugar to each quart of sprouts, cover the pan and boil for 20 minutes—no longer. Drain, season with butter, pepper and a little salt and serve as soon as possible.

Drivers should be especially alert when coming to an intersection, for half of all accidents occur where two roads come together.

Jam Tarts Offered As New Delicacies

When you plan afternoon tea, take a tip from Scotland and serve jam tarts or one of the famous North Country drop cookies. Here are easy recipes for these delicacies that were brought to this country by Sir Thomas Lipton, the famous good loser. Whenever he was bested in a yacht race, he made a point of entertaining his victors, and directly supervised the delicacies.

This version of jam tarts was a specialty of his mother, to whom he was wholeheartedly devoted; and he always insisted that his chefs use her own recipes after he became a famous tea merchant.

Whether you plan a romantic tea for two, refreshments for the woman's club or a treat for your husband and his chess partner, these toothsome treats will be sure to win compliments.

JAM TARTS

- 3 1/3 cups sifted flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¾ teaspoon mace
- ½ cup butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 egg, well beaten
- ¼ cup milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 (10oz.) jar currant jelly or jam

Sift flour. Measure. Sift again with baking powder, salt and mace. Cream butter well. Add sugar gradually, beating until fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Add flour mixture, alternately with milk and vanilla, beating after each addition until smooth. Chill dough about 30 minutes. Roll ⅛-inch thick. Cut with floured cutters. Place a small amount of jelly or jam on a round of dough. Place another round from which the center has been cut, on top, and crisp edges together with tines of a fork. Bake on greased baking sheet in hot oven (425 degrees F.) about eight to 10 minutes. Makes about 32.

SCOTCH DROP COOKIES

- ¾ cup sifted flour
- 1 teaspon baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup butter or other shortening
- 1/3 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 1 cup raisins, chopped
- 1 cup rolled oats
- 1/3 cup milk

Sift flour. Measure. Sift again with baking powder, cinnamon and salt. Cream butter well. Add sugar gradually, beating until fluffy. Add egg and rasins. Add rolled oats. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Drop from teaspoon on ungreased baking sheet. Bake in moderate oven (350 degree F.) 15 to 20 minutes. Makes about 30.

OSLO SANDWICH LOAF

- 1 small loaf bread
- 4 cans smoked Norwegian sardines
- 4 hard cooked eggs, chopped fine
- ¾ cup shredded lettuce
- ½ cup butter, softened
- ⅛ teaspoon onion salt
- Mayonnaise

Cut all crusts from loaf of bread. Slice loaf lengthwise in three equally thick slices. Mash three cans of smoked Norwegian sardines and mix with chopped eggs, lettuce, mayonnaise and butter and seasonings to taste. Spread slices with mixture and reassemble loaf. Cover entire loaf with layer of mayonnaise and lay sardines from fourth can close together across full length of top. Chill thoroughly. Slice vertically to serve.

Of course, the success of these loaves hinges largely on the filling you use. But before taking up that, let's just consider what we might term the mechanics of making the loaf.

In the first place, you work with a whole loaf of bread—and a sharp knife. Shave the crust off the loaf, then slice it into four lengthwise pieces, making the bottom slice a little thicker than the others to facilitate serving.

Butter each slice (use softened, not melted, butter). Then slice, two other fillings on each of two other slices, set one on top of the other and finish off the reassembled loaf with the fourth slice of bread.

Now you dress the loaf. Soften a cupful of white cream cheese, mixing in enough cream to make it spread easily. Then frost the loaf, top and sides, with the mixture, cover it lightly with waxed paper and chill the loaf an hour or so.

Just before serving time, transfer the loaf carefully to a serving platter and add your frills—a design made with more cheese spread through a pastry tube, or decorations made with sliced olives and pickles and strips of green peppers or pimento.

Cut into slices about an inch thick, for serving. And here again, be sure your knife is sharp.

Chilled fillings spread easier than moist ones, so make up your fillings in advance and chill them. You'll need about a cupful of filing to a slice of loaf.

Now, as to the fillings. Here is a selection of trios, any of which is delightful. Perhaps you'll want to go further and combine one filling of one group with others from another group.

I

(a) Blend hard cooked eggs with pickles, celery, parsley, peppers and salad dressing.

(b) Mix tuna with chopped sweet pickles, olives and mayonnaise.

(c) Cream together yellow and white cream cheese, a little chopped chives, nuts and cream.

II

(a) Mix salmon, celery and sweet pickles, moisten with salad dressing.

(b) Combine white cream cheese with pimento-stuffed olives, chopped onions, and salad dressing.

(c) Blend hard cooked eggs with a little chili sauce, diced celery and cucumbers.

III

(a) Cottage cheese mixed with crushed pineapple and diced cucumbers. Moisten with a little salad dressing.

(b) Chopped cooked ham blended with chopped pickles, hard cooked eggs, celery and mayonnaise.

(c) Finely chopped cress combined with tuna, diced celery and pimentos.

IX

(a) Chicken salad blended with broken walnut meats.

(b) Pimentos cream cheese mixed with crumbled cooked bacon and a little chives.

(c) Crushed pineapple mixed with diced celery, green peppers, cucumbers and salad dressing.

QUICK FALL FEAST

How would you like to try your hand this fine fall day at a meal that will take but a trice to prepare and guarantee you good eating in the bargain? Then plan to serve copious soup plates of vegetable beef soup to start the meal with zip and zing. Just open the cans of soup and heat and serve. For the main course, bring on a fat casseroleful of delicate cooked macaroni topped with a pinwheel of tender asparagus tips. An unusual combination, to be sure, but a most delicious dish when you use the ready-to-serve cooked macaroni that comes done up in tins. This savory macaroni is simmered in a rich cream sauce flavored with a nippy blend of cheeses. It surely makes a tasty main course service when you prepare the dish this way:

MACARONI AND ASPARAGUS CASSEROLE

Arrange a thin layer from—

1 medium (17 oz.) can cooked macaroni in cream sauce with cheese in a shallow buttered casserole.

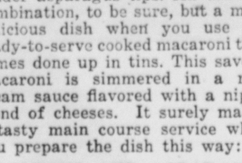

Top with a layer from—

1 small can asparagus tips, having tips radiate from center. Repeat each layer, having asparagus on top.

Sprinkle with—

¼ cup fresh bread crumbs, buttered.

Bake in a moderate oven (375° F.) 20 minutes or until macaroni is heated through. (Serves 4.)

SUCCESSFUL CHIFFONADE SALAD

With the macaroni casserole, you'll want a big bowlful of crisp salad greens drenched in a spicy dressing. Line your bowl with succulent leaves of romaine or other salad greens, then shred or cube a solid head of iceberg lettuce into the bowl and pour this cool and colorful chiffonade dressing over the greens:

BOWL OF SALAD GREENS WITH CHIFFONADE DRESSING

Line salad bowl with—

Romaine or other salad greens.

Cut in 1-inch cubes—

1 head lettuce.

Heap lettuce cubes in center of bowl and serve with chiffonade dressing (below).

CHIFFONADE DRESSING

Mix together—

½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon paprika.

Add, then beat thoroughly—

¼ cup pure cider vinegar
½ cup pure olive oil.

Add, mixing well—

2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 teaspoons chopped onion
1 hard cooked egg, chopped
¼ cup chopped cooked beets.

Serve over salad greens.

DAINTY DESSERT

For dessert turn out a batch of chocolate crunch made by tossing crisp golden rice flakes in a sauce of melted dipping chocolate. Just before the dinner hour, send your nimblest youngster to the store for family sized scoops of ice cream. Then, break the crunch up into crumbles and arrange, sundae style, in deep dessert dishes. (Your youngster will love this dessert for his next party.) Here's how:

CHOCOLATE CRUNCH SUNDAE

Melt over hot water—

¼ lb. sweet dipping chocolate.

Stir in gently until they are well coated with chocolate—

1½ cups rice flakes.

Spread rice flakes in a thin layer on waxed paper and cool. Break up finely with fingers and sprinkle over Vanilla or frozen custard ice cream. (Serves 10.)

Now Is the Time To Make Pickles

If you have ever lived in the country or the "near country" you will no doubt recall September as the month when the air was filled with the smell of burning leaves and of hot, spicy vinegar. Well, I remember walking down the street and sniffing the air before house after house where the mistress was at that moment turning green tomatoes, apples, beets, cucumbers and even peaches and pears into tasty pickled products that smelt simply grand in the making.

I like September to this day as the time to begin pickling and jelly making for the Winter months even though my "pickle shelf" may be only the end of shelf in the kitchenette with room for perhaps half a dozen jars at a time. Some of my favorites are those given below. Start making them now, if you like pickles—and who doesn't? Some like 'em sweet and some like 'em sour; take your choice of the few varieties given here. More will appear in a couple of weeks as other foods suitable for pickling come into markets.

GREEN TOMATOES USED

Green tomatoes are largely used in making such delicacies as green tomato soy, picalilli and a number of other more or less similar varieties. Green tomato soy claims our interest at the moment and here is how you make about three quarts of delicious pickle.

Select firm, medium sized green tomatoes, wash them, remove the stem end and slice the tomatoes, using enough to make four quarts measured after slicing. Cut six fair sized white onions in thin slices and mix them with the tomatoes. Mix these with two cups vinegar, two cups light brown sugar (less if you like a more sour pickle), one tablespoon cooking salt, one tablespoon black pepper, one tablespoon dry mustard and one-half tablespoon each ground allspice and cloves. Mix and then cook gently until the tomatoes and onions are tender, stirring the concoction frequently. When done, cool and then pack into glass preserve jars or into a stone crock. If a crock is used it must have a close fitting cover.

This is a memory task, but the results when the pickles are finished, warrant it. At the end of the second three days, drain the cucumbers, wipe each one with cloth and cut in chunky pieces about an inch thick. Line a large preserving kettle with grape leaves, put in the cucumber chunks and cover with a mixture of equal parts vinegar and water. Boil gently for two hours or until the cucumbers are tender and almost transparent. Mix together two pounds sugar, three pints vinegar, one ounce stick cinnamon, one ounce celery salt and one-half ounce whole allspice and heat to the boiling point. Drain the cucumbers, put them in a crock or in glass jars and pour the boiling sugar syrup over them to cover completely. Next day, pour off the spiced syrup, reheat to the boiling point and pour over the pickles again. Repeat this each day until you have done it four times. If the juice boils down and is not enough to cover the pickles, add more vinegar. When done, store in a dark place. These are delicious and well worth the trouble they take.

Corn relish is an entirely different type of pickle—sour rather than sweet and lightly mustardy in flavor. Cut the corn from 18 medium-sized ears of uncooked corn. Slice a bunch of cleaned celery and finely chop a two-pound head of cabbage; slice four onions and chop four green peppers from which the seeds have been removed. Mix all the vegetables together, put in a large kettle and add one quart of vinegar. Mix together one cup flour, one-half cup salt, one and one-half teaspoons dry mustard, one and one-half teaspoons tumeric powder, one-quarter teaspoon cayenne pepper and gradually add one quart vinegar. Heat the vegetable mixture to the boiling point, add the flour mixture to it, stirring constantly and boil very slowly for 40 minutes. Pack into hot, sterilized preserve jars.

Lower Back Pains

Pains in the lower spine have had more causes, according to the opinions of many writers, than any other weakness that can happen to the human body. Diseased tonsils, abscessed teeth, thyroid and gall bladder infection, chronic appendicitis and many other local infections have in turn, been blamed for the punishing pains in the lower spine. That the X-Ray, in recent years, should show that most lower back pains are due to interference with the lumbar and sacral nerves, was only a natural outcome of scientific research. Chiropractic today is recognized almost all over the civilized world as a specific correction for lower back pain, because it is concerned only with the correction of nerve interference and the adjustment of the spine. Recent scientific papers read by other healing professions show a marked turn to recommend the correction of abnormal mechanical interference to nerves in the lower spine for relief from pelvic pain and weakness.

HOME OWNERS FORUM

By ABNER GORDON

REPAIR of structural cracks in plaster walls and ceilings does not necessitate refinishing the entire surface.

Such fissures are caused by settlement due to faulty construction or lumber shrinkage.

Crack should be scraped with knife blade until opening is at least one-quarter inch at surface, tapering slightly wider to base, so sufficient fresh plaster may be forced in to assure firm bond.

Brush out all loose sand and plaster Then wet down crack area to prevent old plaster from absorbing moisture from patch, causing it to set poorly and remain chalky.

Press fresh plaster well into place and strike off even with surface.

Spray water onto surface after plaster patch has set, keeping area damp for 24 hours.

In making plaster, place water in mixing box before sifting in dry plaster. Stir the mix thoroughly to dissolve lumps. Plaster putty consistency should be such that it can be picked up with trowel and forced into crack. Add small quantity of ordinary glue to mix, if plaster sets too rapidly.

Q.—My cement flooring is dusting. What treatment do you suggest?

A.—Treat "soft," dusting cement with solution one part water glass (sodium silicate liquid form) to four parts water. This hardens the surface and should eliminate dusting.

When solution has thoroughly dried, two coats of oil paint, plus enamel finish for hard wear, will seal cement against atmospheric conditions, eliminating this cause for dusting.

As priming coat apply paint composed of 3 parts by volume soft paste white lead and 5 parts of a half and half mixture of raw linseed oil and lead mixing or lead reducing oil.

For body coat use 6 parts soft paste white lead, 1 part raw linseed oil, 4 parts turpentine. Add ½ pint drier for each 100 lbs. soft paste white lead used.

For finish use high grade floor enamel.

SPECIFIC CHARGES MADE IN GRAVES CASE

Jefferson City, September 25.—Attorney General Roy McKittrick today answered the State Supreme Court's request for "more specific and certain" charges against Jackson County Prosecutor W. W. Graves by citing a long list of cases which he charged Graves "failed and refused" to prosecute.

The Attorney General, who was urged last Friday by Gov. Lloyd C. Stark to use all possible speed in his suit to oust the indicted Prosecutor from office, declared:

"Laws prohibiting gambling, bookmaking, lotteries, bawdy houses, brothels and houses of assignation have been openly and notoriously violated" in Jackson County. "Although the respondent (Graves) knew of said violations, he has * * * refused to investigate," he charged.

"Many violations were committed in the presence and with the knowledge and consent" of the T. J. Pendergast-supported Prosecutor, McKittrick declared in an amendatory petition to his original ouster proceedings filed last May.

The Attorney General charged that not only had Graves failed to prosecute criminal cases pending in the Jackson County Circuit Court, "but on the contrary has in a great number of cases dismissed or caused to be dismissed charges on which he had sufficient material and legal evidence available to convict."

Drive in today for an Expert Pre-Winter Check-up

You know that little things count most—in a lot of cases. And the fact is just as true when you drive a car . . . if a little bolt is loose, you can easily end up in a ditch . . . if a little bearing dries up, you'll have a big repair bill in no time. And so on down the line, from bumper to bumper—it's the litlte things. If they're wrong—expect trouble. If they're right—your car gives you good service.

During the winter months, more than at any other season of the year, those little things need expert attention. Battery and ignition, radiator and cooling system, greases and lubrication, tires and gasoline—winter puts all of these parts under new and greater strains.

What better decision could you make than to drive in today and have everything checked for winter driving—at F. & M. Oil Co.. We're equipped for quicker service, and all our work is expert—backed by years of experience in making all cars give longer, better and more economical service all year 'round.

SIKESTON STANDARD

Southeast Missouri's Leading Semi-Weekly

VOLUME 28 — SIKESTON, SCOTT COUNTY, MISSOURI FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1939 — NUMBER 4

THE STANDARD ONLY Streamlined Newspaper IN SIKESTON DISTRICT

The P. C. Editor Says:

Our pet polecat, "Clint H.", will be missed from The Standard booth in the Jubilee tent as he is being used in the conservation exhibit at Jefferson City this week. A long distance call to Jefferson City asked to have him returned for the Jubilee but whether or not he will get in in time for our display remains to be seen. However, we will have on display a civit cat skin in a frame that might do.

* * *

While a good soaking rain is badly needed over this section. We hope it will not visit us until after the Jubilee is over, the tent down and everybody gets home. Then let her come.

* * *

The Standard management has given orders that no more blind ads will be run in our want column of this paper referring prospects to The Standard box number. It is a nuisance to the office officials and causes extra work and then we get tongue lashings from some folks, all for 25 cents. If you can't give your phone, your house address, or your name, it will not be run in The Standard.

It is still undecided which day will be Turkey Day in Charleston and Sikeston. President Roosevelt has taken it upon himself to designate Thursday, November 23, as Thanksgiving Day instead of the age-old last Thursday in November, and Governor Stark has trailed along. It matters not which day the President and Governor backs, Thursday, November 30, will be our Thanksgiving Day.

Most boys who start lifes work by carrying country newspapers have a bright future ahead of them. One boy who formerly carried The Standard is now doing fourteen years at Joliet, Ill., and he was a high type boy when he first entered the employ of The Standard. You can never tell.

In the mail Thursday morning came a box containing two loaves of pumpernickel rye bread from the Diedrich pastry shops of St. Louis, sent at the request of E. J. Hoke of that city. Then another package from the Walter Freund Bread Co. of St. Louis containing a loaf of rye bread 18 inches long and big around. It certainly pays to advertise as the paragraph carried in The Standard last week wishing for a loaf of old fashioned rye bread brought us results from Kansas City, Jackson, and two from St. Louis. We'll say we'll eat rye bread and like it.

Squire Gupton, of Morley, was in town Wednesday forenoon and feeling fine and thankful that he escaped without a scratch in a recent wreck. R. D. Clayton who was talking with the Squire remarked that he must have as many lives as a cat as he had lived through nine wrecks. The tenth may be the last one, so be more careful R. D.

The French and the British soldiers in Europe are again fighting our fight in that country and it is as little as we can do to furnish all kinds of Red Cross aid for the wounded. Maybe it would save the life of some soldier to have the Red Cross bandages handy to bind up his wound. Can't you cut out your cigarettes, your beer or other belly wash for a week or more and give that money to the Red Cross.

Curly hair is at times a handicap for a real boy though is very sightly to the girls and especially to a fond mother. Boys in the football squad who have heavy growths of hair and wear the head gear in practice and in contests usually have their hair trimmed fairly short. All but one followed this rule but this one was caught off the school grounds and given an amateur hair cut by some unknown horse clipper artist and when he was unhaltered and turned loose, he hiked for home and then it was that the mother discovered how her son's head of curls had been butchered by some funny cut-up. The Superintendent was called but he knew nothing; the Coach was called and he knew nothing. The dastardly deed was not committed on the school ground and their control reached no further.

Short Cotton Season Seen In Weather

Unless Rains and Cold Wave Checks, Picking To Last About Month

Five weeks of hot, dry weather have meant heavy pickings and good quality in the cotton fields, but at the rate the crop is going to the gins an extra short season is in prospect.

Most merchants and business men depending on the cotton trade would rather see the season extended over a longer period, with some rainy and cool weather to break up the picking periods. In many cases, the faster money is made in the cotton industry the faster and more loosely it is spent.

NEARLY HALF PICKED

Between 40 and 50 per cent of this season's cotton already has been picked, it was estimated at the office of the New Madrid County agent.

If the present type of weather should continue, the cotton season may not last over another month longer, W. C. Robinson, assistant agent of New Madrid county, estimated.

Some years picking has gone into January.

SCOTT COUNTY RECORD

For the first half of September, Scott County gins turned out 2115 bales of cotton, in contrast with 937 for the same period last year, according to the report of Tharon Stallings, special agent for the Department of Commerce Bureau of Census.

This figure denotes an exceptionally heavy output, because ginnings last year were considered high as compared with the 1937 results.

QUALITY UP

The weather, and persistent efforts of county agents', ginners and others to have better seed planted, are responsible for the higher quality this season. Delta & Pine Land 11A and Stoneville Ambassador varieties are the favorites, and produce a better staple.

A price upturn since the European war started, and lower ginning costs, increased the amount to the farmer. A price now of $50 a bale means approximately a $20,000,000 crop in Southeast Missouri.

Randolph to Trial Oct. 20

At the request of the defense counsel, Circuit Judge Schult continued until Oct. 20 the trial of Hershel Randolph, Sikeston land agent charged with felonious assault, in court at New Madrid Tuesday morning.

Milo Grasham, attorney for the defendant, said he had been unable to serve a subpoena on a witness out of the city.

Randolph is accused of attacking Alfonse Deschamp, farmer near Morehouse, last spring in downtown Sikeston.

Davis Plays in Maryville Opener

Carol Davis, football and basketball star of Sikeston High School last season, played nearly a full half in the opening game of the Maryville, Mo., Teachers College, M. I. A. A. champions, against the Talaquah, Okla., Teachers at Maryville last week, won by the Missourians, 7-0.

A backfield man at Sikeston, Carol was shifted to end at Maryville. Playing 19 minutes of the game is an unusual distinction for a freshman, especially when there are six letterman ends already on the squad. The team meets Washington U. at St. Louis this week.

Carol is rated an excellent chance of making the first string of Maryville's basketball squad.

JAYCEES VOTE $5 TO SEWING ROOM

The Junior Chamber of Commerce Tuesday evening voted to contribute $5 to the Red Cross sewing room to be established in the armory building.

Cadillac Knocks Old Car 25 Feet, Driver Escapes

A Cadillac sedan that hit a Model A sedan croswise knocked it 25 feet along Highway 61 at the Bell City road intersection, 11 miles north of Sikeston, at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, but the driver of the smaller car, Sylvester Tanner, 62, of near Advance, escaped with minor injuries. Tanner's car did not turn over, according to State Trooper Melvin Dace.

As mashed front was the damage to the Cadillac, driven by Ray R. Fisher, 50, of Detroit, Mich., who was accompanied by Harvey G. Taggart of Detroit. They were bound for Detroit, from Memphis. The side of the Ford was staved in. Tanner was traeated for cuts and brises at Oran. The others were not hurt.

Sgt. Dace said the farmer's car pulled onto the highway in front of the Cadillac.

In Custody on Check Charges

Man Taken Here Said To Have Passed $700 Worth at Steele, Mo.

At the request of Dunklin County authorities, City Officer Claude McManus Tuesday evening arrested Andrew Lovell, 45, of Holland, Mo., on a charge of issuing worthless checks at Steele. Constable Spense of Steele took Lovell there Wednesday morning.

The constable said Lovell is named in several warrants on charges of passing bad checks totaling about $700. Lovell, a stock dealer, was taken into custody at the auction barn.

Before he was surrendered to Dunklin County, the prisoner was compelled to pay $8 of an old fine against him here. He was arrested here several months ago after allegedly hiring a taxi to haul him from Sikeston to Caruthersville and back and failing to pay for the ride. Unable to pay a $10 fine at the time, he was committed to the city street, but departed after working two days, it was stated at police headquarters. He was allowed $2 for the days he worked.

Game Warden To Locate Here

Frank I. "Doc" Jones, game warden who has been stationed for several years at Charleston, will move to Sikeston to be more centrally located, he informed here. He is moving to the Ben Welter house on Prosperity.

Mr. Jones is assigned to Scott, Mississippi and New Madrid counties. He and five new conservation agents had been added for this part of the state.

Rye Bread Prayer Answered From K. C.

Kansas City, Sept. 25.—Col. C. L. Blanton, owner and editor of the Sikeston Standard, will eat rye bread tomorrow. Rye bread is his weakness. According to a paragraph in his "Polecat Column", a column given over to Colonel Blanton's salty comments, rye bread also is a weakness of the Sikeston bakers.

"It's not real rye bread," Scribe Blanton complains. "Tastes more like a mixture of bran and sawdust. Wish we could buy a loaf of real old fashioned rye once in a while, the kind you can get in the city."

This morning Mayor Bryce B. Smith received a clipping containing the Sikeston editor's supplication for "rye that is rye." The Mayor, whose large fortune was amassed as a successful baker and who, in being cast by circumstance in the role of baker missed being the successful newspaper man his natural flair would have made him, saw in the item his chance for a daily good deed. Slipping away from the superelegance of the Mayor's great deep-carpeted, walnut panelled office, to the lesser loveliness, albeit cleanliness, of the Smith Bakery, he repaired to the mixing room.

There are two stories of what happened next . . . One is that the diminutive baker-Mayor shucked his ever-immaculate raiment and donned the white cap, coat and apron of a baker. The other is that he stood over a mixing board while one of the regular bakers worked under his instructions. So far as Colonel Blanton is concerned, it makes no difference which story is true—the Colonel will eat such rye bread tomorrow as he perhaps never clamped his teeth down on before—rye bread as black as his hat and with "everything" that real rye possesses in the way of pungence. A 3-pound loaf of it was headed toward Colonel Blanton's address this afternoon, with the compliments of Mayor Smith and a letter inviting Colonel Blanton and "all members of the great tribe of Missouri Blantons" to come to Kansas City next Saturday, September 30, to attend the Kansas City Air Fair and Airport rededication, the Aviation Banquet in the evening and, if his 76-year-old feet haven't lost their reaction to such tantalizing rhythm as that from the band of Ben Bernie and all the Lads, to stay for the night session of swing and the floor show, at the great Kansas City Municipal Auditorium.

In his letter of invitation, Mayor Smith wrote:

"If only those Blantons who are newspaper editors in Missouri come to the Airport Dedication, we'll have a sizable crowd."

Big Southeast Missouri Jubilee Arrives With Many Attractions

JUBILEE Hot Spots

Those tent erectors had the system. On the rear of one truck was a genuine pile-driver. Manipulated by the car motor, the driver pounded in those mighty tent stakes as a big steam driver would beat in posts for a railroad bridge.

Yellow and green pennants and bunting appeared over downtown streets and on store fronts almost by magic.

In order that the music may travel over the dance floor better, Scientillating Ina Ray Hutton and her Playboys will occupy a stand placed down on the dance floor, instead of the armory stage. Reason: Acoustic defects swallowed part of Bernie Cummins' music when the band played from the stage at the last dance.

Up to Tuesday, reservations for tables at the dance had been made for 410 persons, according to Charles Bethune, the chief reservator. Hurry! They are going . . . going. . .

Man Accused Of Taking Billfold Containing $50

Constable Walter Ancell, City Officer Claude McManus and Deputy Constable Leroy Heisserer Tuesday arrestel Clyde Barnes, 36, at Morehouse on a charge of stealing $50 from the Grant Bros. Store at McMullin. Twenty-eight dollars was recovered, Constable Ancell said, but the remainder was spent.

The money was taken when Gene Grant left his wallet momentarily in the store washroom and went to serve a motorist outside. Barnes, according to the constable, went into the washroom and the billfold was missing shortly after.

When Barnes was caught, he took officers to where he had tossed the billfold, behind a downtown tavern, and then accompanied them to a farm south of Hunterville where the $28 was hidden, the constable said. He had bought $8.40 worth of clothes and left them at a downtown store, but this sum was redeemed by the store, the officer said.

Brought to the Sikeston jail, Barnes, who formerly lived at McMullin and now resides at Hunterville, was released when charges were not pressed.

When the large truck trailer tire which he was filling with air blew out, John Middleton was knocked almost unconscious and received a severe gash on the head Tuesday evening at the service station of the Flying Red Horse Tavern, on Highway 61 south. The iron rim with the tire was thrown 25 feet.

Mr. Middleton, employed at the Bus Matthews service station, was using the air hose across the street when his own compressor failed . He was taken by Constable Walter Ancell to Dr. H. B. WITCHES AND TOTEM POLES

THIS Indian woman shown with her ceremonial drum is one of the Araucanians of Chile. The totem-pole effect is the altar of the witch doctor or machi, who drives away their ills. The altar is a series of steps cut in a log, topped usually by the carving of a face, and always adorned with branches of the Canelo, the sacred tree of the Araucanians. The Canelo has played an important role in the life of the Araucanians for hundreds of years. In its shade their feasts were held and their councils of war and peace. The tree always stands in front of the machi's house to drive the evil spirits away—he uses branches of the sacred tree in all the mystic ceremonies he employs to cure illness, to foretell future events, to find lost articles and people, and to win the favor of the gods.

Very often the machi is called upon by a family to petition the spirits to send rain and a rich harvest. A feast is held to which all friends and relatives are invited. The machi altar is set up near a Canelo tree. From its top the machi addresses the spirits, accompanying his prayers with wild gesticulations and chants while assembled guests sing and dance around the foot of the altar and the sacred tree. The ceremony ends in the "sacred leap" when the machi jumps from the altar into the arms of men below. The celebration, it goes without saying, is heavily accompanied by food and drink. This is only one of dozens of mystic rites still observed by Araucanian tribes — their primitive villages scattered around Temuco are one of the most intriguing sights to be seen on the weekly cruises to Chile.—EDNA MAE STARR

6000 Acres to Be Cleared at Greenville

Greenville, Mo., Sept. 25.—Contracts for clearing approximately 6000 acres, which will be covered by the "permanent pool," created by the Wappapello flood control dam now under construction, will be let shortly, according to Maj. Daniel C. Nose of the Memphis, Tenn., office, War Department Engineers.

Maj. Nose notified the Wayne County Court of plans to award contracts so the basin could be cleared by the time the dam is ready for use. Work is expected to start shortly after October 1.

The County Court was advised it could bid on the clearing contract involving the county-owned land, and there were indications that individual property owners, whose land is being purchased by the government for condemnation, will be given permission to bid on clearing the land they are vacating.

No announcement has been made as to whether the land must be cleared by a certain time.

Those bidding on clearing projects, it was indicated, will be permitted to take all timber and dispose of it in their own way. Some of the finest timber in the Wappapello National Forest unit may be found in the 6000-acre basin, timber experts say.

When the dam is placed in service—about two years from now—the 6000-acre lake will be stocked with fish and will be used for recreational purposes. The stage of the lake will remain stationary except in times when it will be necessary to close the gates at the dam and hold back floodwaters following heavy rains, in order to prevent danger to the St. Francis River levees below the dam.

When the dam is in full service the lake will be about 65 feet deep just north of the dam and will cover approximately 25,000 acres. That is the reason it has been found necessary to move the county seat, Greenville, to a new location. The 114-year-old county seat town likely will be rebuilt on the hills about two miles north.

A man who believes that if Mohammed cannot come to the mountain, the mountain should be moved to Mohammed is Joseph A. Massey, a member of the Town Council of New Carlisle, Ind. Massey built himself a new home, was chagrined to discover it was outside the town limits, which nullified his membership on the Council. Since he could not move his house into town, he had the town move out to him by extending its limits.

Well, well, it is a small world after all. Father John Gabriels, pastor of a Lansing, Mich., church, was visiting the Holy Land when he saw a swarthy native brakeman eyeing him on a train. The brakeman finally introduced himself, revealed he was a former parishioner of the Lansing priest—at the Ionia, Mich., Reformatory.

Roy Welch, Feroni Come Out on Top

Roy Welch and Joe Feroni were winners Wednesday night in the Legion arena, and the bruisers, George Bennett and Charles Sinkey, were losers.

Welch took the last two from Bennett after considerable bruising in the first, and Feroni flattened Sinkey in the first and third.

Bennett was no gentleman. He butted Roy's head against the iron rings holding the ropes and caused Mike Meroney to all but disqualify him early in the match. The Utah grappler took the first in 17 minutes with a body pin. The Canadian won the next two the same way, in seven and six-minute falls.

Feroni was at his best against the Mississippi Mauler. Both men fouled, but Sinkey was kept at bay by the New Yorker a great part of the time.

The first went to Feroni in 16 minutes with a body pin. Sinkey came back in 13 minutes with a half-jackknife, and Feroni settled it in 12 minutes with a arm lock.

WPA TO HIRE 5000 MORE IN MISSOURI

Jefferson City, Sept. 27.—Missouri's WPA rolls will go up 5000 in October—the first increase in the state's monthly employment quota within a year.

Acting Administrator E. M. Basye said the state rolls will be expanded to 65,000 next month.

Most of those added will be taken from the ranks of workers laid off last summer as a result of the rule against more than 18 months of continuous WPA employment, Basye said.

For 10 successive months after Missouri hit its peak of 117,000 WPA workers last fall there had been a steady decrease to the September low of 60,000

Hitler's Mother Schooled Him in Greatness

ADOLF HITLER, the man whose shadow darkens all Europe today, inherited from his mother and father those traits that make him what he is: a ruthless plunderer, a self-appointed Messiah to lead Germany back to greatness.

From his mother, Klara Poelzl, who ran away from home at fifteen and came back a broken and defeated woman ten years later, Hitler inherited his "mission" in life and the will to achieve it. Klara coddled her son, fawned on him, coached him in greatness, sought to hide his physical weakness (he was a puny child) with an outergrowth of demi-God arrogance, says Jerry Allen in an article, "Directors of Destiny," in the October Good Housekeeping.

Alois Hitler, twenty-three years his wife's senior, despised his son for his weakness. He was tall and powerful and a drinking man, and he never missed a chance to beat and torment Adolf. From his father Hitler learned what fear and hatred and what force can do.

"He was terrified of his father, hated him for the beatings he received himself and for those his mother suffered," writes Allen. "Yet he saw that the ability to give those beatings, pure force, makes a man boss, even in his own home. And he has never forgotten that in boss rule it is force that counts."

Hitler was a poor student, he couldn't concentrate on his studies. He failed in everything but drawing and gymnasium. Klara made excuses that the schools were at fault. She transferred him from one to another, with no improvement. But in Adolf's aptitude for drawing, she envisioned him a great artist. All artists, she said, were "moonstruck." Adolf was different from other boys, in her estimation.

Only once did Klara waver in her belief that Hitler was destined for greatness. That was when he was expelled from school for smoking. Terrified that he might follow in his father's footsteps — "a man who drank too much, ate too much, smoked too much"—she worked on him with such hawk-like attention that soon he was able to resist every temptation. As a result, Hitler grew up without any close friends, without a girl of his own (his mother was the substitute), without a full life. He grew up a loafer. He loved the soft life.

Hitler was fourteen when his father died. Five years later his mother followed. Although she was suffering from cancer, it was the shock of Adolf's failure to pass the entrance examinations at the Art Academy in Vienna, that killed her. She left a proud, penniless youth who didn't know how and didn't want to work.

"Ever since then," Allen says, "Hitler has been trying to justify his mother's faith in him."

SOUR MILK

Buttermilk cannot be said to have a nutritional value equal to that of fresh milk, since most of the fat has been removed. It does, however, contain practically the same amount of good body-building protein and minerals that are found in sweet milk. Due to its content of lactic and it can be used by some adults more effectively than sweet milk.

Sour milk or buttermilk makes waffles, pancakes, doughnuts, cakes, biscuits and muffins that are light and more tender than those made with sweet milk. This is because the lactic acid in these milks soften the gluten which is that part of the flour that causes toughness in baker products.

When sour milk is substituted for smeet milk in baking, these rules have been found practicable: As a leavening agent 1 teaspoon of soda is equivalent to 4 teaspoons of baking powder. One-half teaspoon soda is required to neutralize 1 cup sour milk or cream.

To substitute sour milk for sweet in a recipe, use the same amount of sour milk as sweet milk called for, add ½ teaspoon soda for each cup, and subtract two teaspoons baking powder from the amount given. For example, if a recipe calls for 1 cup sweet milk and 4 teaspoons baking powder use 1 cup sour milk, ½ teaspoon soda, and 2 teaspoons baking powder.

If sour cream is used in place of sour milk, the amount of fat used must be reduced.

A telephone call sent six policemen to a Cheltenham, Pa., home in search of a prowler. They saw a suspicious looking man, crept cautiously up behind him, suddenly pounced on him. Then they apologized. Their captive was a fellow detective assigned to patrol the district nightly—looking for prowlers.

COURT WILL DECIDE HOW TO DON CORSET

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Do you step into your corset milady, or do you pull it over your head?

Learned Judges of the Appellate Division of the New York State Supreme Court face consideration of the subject in an action involving the appeal of Miss Anna P. Enright, Binghampton shop owner, from a lower court award of $5500 damages to Mr. and Mrs. Frederick P. Welch, also of Binghampton.

Mrs. Welch claims a clerk in the Enright shop pulled a "two-way stretch corset" over her head and, though she proteted of pain, continued to "pull, yank and tug." She contends she dislocated a vertebra, for which a lower court granted her $4500. Her husband received $1000 for loss of her services.

Lower court testimony featured a discussion of how to get into a corset.

He is serving a 15-months' sentence, having pleaded guilty.

He entered Leavenworth on May 29, 1939, and will be eligible for parole Oct. 29.

One member of the Parole Board will hear his application and following this hearing, the case will be taken up by the entire board in Washington. Under parole procedure, counsel is not permitted to attend the hearings.

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
Kansas City, Missouri

Sept. 25, 1939

Col. C. L. Blanton
Polecat Editor
Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri

My dear Colonel Blanton:

My friend Harry Jacks, of The Missouri Democrat, called my attention to your dilemma regarding the rye bread. To one whose life has been devoted to providing bread to those who hunger for it, your plea was quite moving.

Looking toward the realization of your wish, I am mailing to you under a separate cover, in this mornings mail, a loaf of rye bread that I believe you will declare is all that a rye bread connoiseuer could ask for. At least it is the best an old time baker could do after spending several years away from the mixing board and doing his mixing mostly in politics.

I hope it pleases your taste. If it does, then please accept my invitation to you and to all of the widespread Blanton family throughout Missouri, to attend the dedication of the Kansas City Municipal Airport, here, next Saturday, the Aviation banquet in the evening and if those feet still yearn for rythm at the age of 76, we'll take in the Aviation Ball at the big Municipal Auditorium that night, where Ben Bernie and his Lads will furnish the music.

If only those Blantons who are in the newspaper business in Missouri come to the dedication, we're assured of a crowd.

Here's hoping the bread goes over.

Cordially yours,
BRYCE B. SMITH,
Mayor.

REMEDY GARDEN FAULTS

At this season of the year many homemakers with other members of the family are checking over their garden success for any faults that may be corrected next spring. By this method the garden can be made to yield a maximum return and the family will have an adequate supply of vegetables to use fresh to can and to store.

Often the rows of vegetables are planted too close together in the home garden to permit proper development and cultivation. Observation at this season of the year will help the grower to know which crops require wide growing room and will show whether or not the planting distance between the rows is correct.

A second common fault with the planting of a number of garden vegetables is that they are planted too thick in the row. It will also be helpful to the gardened to oberve the arrangement of crops in the garden to see whether the quick-maturing crops—those which will be in the garden only a few weeks—are growing together and those which will be in the garden all the year are planted side by side.

The advantage of such an arrangemnet is that if the early maturing crops are planted together as soon as they are harvested, that area which they occupied can be used for later plantings. This plan conserves space which is an important item with many family gardens.

It is a good idea at this time of the year to check on whether too much or too little of any one planting of a vegetable has been made. It is a common sight in many garden to see rows of lettuce and radishes with all of the plants having passed the stage of development where their quality is the best for table use. Small plantings of each vegetable should have been made at two week intervals to have the best quality produce instead of planting them all at one time. The same thing is true of spinach, carrots, beets, mustard and several other crops.

PLANS COMPLETE FOR NEIGHBOR DAY

Benton Neighbor Day, sponsored by the Scott County Farm Bureau is expected to be "bigger and better" this year. More entertainment and the biggest premium list in a number of years should encourage a large attendance and more exhibits.

At a special meeting of the Farm Bureau Board held Friday, September 22, arrangements were made to have guards for the display tables. "Exhibitors can expect to have their exhibits taken care of and returned to them in good order," says Carl O. Luper, President of the Scott County Farm Bureau.

"Neighbor Day" is exactly what the name says—a meeting of neighbors. Scott County is a farmers county and farm and home exhibits are earnestly solicited. "Farmers come and bring your exhibits and spend the day visiting with your neighbors", is the invitation extended by the Scott County Farm Bureau.

ODDS AND ENDS

The garbage of New York City is valued at $1,000,000 a year as fertilizer and hog feed.

Airplane engineers report that the placing of engines in the wings reduce the drag as much as one-fifth.

A newly developed Air Corps plane is reported to be capable of climbing 5000 feet in 1.6 minutes. The ship is known as the CW-21 and cruises at a speed of more than 300 miles an hour at 17,500 feet.

A new light plane has a tricycle type landing gear, the front wheel of which is steerable. The plane is of all metal construction except for fabric on the outer wing panels. The ship carries two passengers at a top speed of 101 miles an hour.

To maintain flying speed throughout the takeoff, a telephone hook-up between a glider and launching car was recently tried in England. Wires threaded through the towing cable keeps the pilot in communication with the ground crew until the plane is loosed.

The Standard $2.00 per year.

Going Off to School? Then Take a Hint—

NEW vistas and new settings face thousands of girls in their teens who are off to boarding school or college for the first time this month. A stranger to everyone, certain to feel homesick, the new girl must get on and make friends as quickly as possible.

How can you get people who don't know you interested in you? Henrietta Ripperger asks in the October Good Housekeeping. Move one is to get yourself done up in a way so as to attract attention. Eyes will turn your way and people will want to know who the cute trick is. Be ultra-fussy about grooming, Miss Ripperger advises. Take time to dress. Look out for slip trouble.

Before leaving for school, it's wise to find out what's being worn on the campus. Be subtle about color. You're grown-up now, so forget navy blue and white sweaters and try maize, French blue, pearl gray—to go with skirts of prune, brown, or dark red. Something important to bring along is a bright, short, enormous necklace. It's the little touches that make you stand out.

Move two is getting off on the right foot. Don't, Miss Ripperger warns, bring mother along. You may as well start in from the beginning on your own. Mother means well, of course, but . . .

Don't force your opinions on a crowd you don't know very well. This doesn't mean be a clam, but a chatter-box is infinitely worse. And above everything, don't talk about your family. Dad may be the smartest man in the world to you, but that's what every girl thinks. Other don'ts on your "must" list are: Don't talk about the family wealth; all the men whose hearts you've broken; your old school where you were a big-shot, and don't look down your nose when sororities or fraternities are mentioned.

It's the most wonderful feeling in the world to have your friends say later on: "We were all crazy about you the minute we set eyes on you!"

GUIDES TO BUYING WOMEN'S COATS

Chilly mornings are reminders that winter coats will be needed soon. The old one may be satisfactory if relined and cleaned. If it has served its day then a new one will be necessary. The following guides will assist you in your selection.

Make certain when trying on a coat that it is comfortable when you walk, set or reach up. Read all labels giving information about the fabric, fur or workmanship. Long wearing weaves are firm and close, with about as many yarns in one direction as the other. The yarns are even in size so that all wear and soil alike. A loosely woven fabric tends to become baggy with wear.

Another important item is a lining that will last as long as the coat. Other qualities of a good lining are attractive appearance and a slippery texture that makes the coat easy to put on and take off. The lining should be colorfast, resistant to wrinkling, proof to water spots, and have a guarantee against shrinkage.

The most serviceable lining for an all-purpose coat is a good firm quality of pure-dye silk. A weighted silk may give satisfactory wear for a year or two. The better qualities of rayons give good service also but they need to be securely seamed to avoid fraying.

The warmth of a coat depends a great deal on its interlining. Wool, either as a woven fabric or as fibers quilted between cotton and mull, is desirable in an all-purpose coat. In sports coats, chamois-like materials turn cold and wind effectively. Look for tags that describe the interlining.

Our 42nd Year in Southeast Missouri

WHO TAKES THE CAKE?

Many who attended the Jubilee last year will recall the major part of our Frigidaire demonstration was carried on by Mrs. Octavia Webb of the Frigidaire Company, a recognized range specialist. We are sure all will be delighted to learn that Mrs. Webb will again be in charge of the Frigidaire booth under the big mercantile tent. There will be a distinct difference however in the Frigidaire Range program. Last season Mrs. Webb merely talked to interested callers relative to advantages of cooking with electricity. This year a beautiful new Frigidaire Range will be installed on the platform just as it would be in a home and Mrs. Webb will do plain and fancy cooking directly in front of interested housekeepers—and will answer all questions asked on that subject. She will also lecture as she cooks on accepted methods of saving steps in kitchens while at the same time demonstrating how to preserve natural flavors and full nutrition in cooked foods.

A special feature of Mrs. Webbs program this time will be the mixing and baking of several cakes each day in this Frigidaire Range—and of course these fine cakes will be given away. We don't know just exactly how it will be done but two or three times each day some one will "take the cake". Please call and give Mrs. Webb a second welcome. She deserves it.

MOORE'S HEATERS—PHILCO RADIOS—IN TENT

Mr. Stroude of the Moore Stove Works will be on hand to tell you all about Moore's Heaters and Ranges—both coal and oil burning types and Sam Wilcox will also be there to say a few words in praise of Philcos—For the week Sam will be known as Mr. "Philcox". Both these gentlemen will have samples to show and improvements on them that warrant your attention. Give 'em a break pleace—while doing the big Tent Show.

GOOD LUCK TO MR. LEECH

Owners of this store received quite a shock few days ago when presented with the resignation of E. N. Leech—known among boys around the store as "Newt". For almost nine years Mr. Leech has been our head salesman and during that time he has made a fine record of sales. Energetic—honest and attentive to service due his patrons—we spent no time—worrying about kick backs on his transactions. He goes to Helena, Arkansas at a considerable advance in earnings on which promotion we congratulate him. He will be distinctly missed by the store force and by hundreds whom he has served during his stay with us. May his usefulness increase in his new home.

Jubilee Hot Spots

The Agricultural Show will be a "big thing." Besides the farm bureaus of the surrounding and Scott counties having exhibits as units, there will be special displays entered by 4-H clubs, such as those specializing in raising pigs. Part of the Ag. Show will be in Railroad Park and the livestock display in Malone Park.

For Agricultural Show prizes, besides premiums, blue, red and white placards—representing first, second and third prizes—as well as purple ones for grand champion awards, will be offered.

Front Street west of New Madrid and Scott Street looked a head different with carnival rides standing in the middle of the right-of-way. Added thrills will be found in the rides, such as the octupus, where the seats breeze past a telephone pole, lamp post and the like. Not too close, however.

Important Themes Of The Paris Openings

(As gathered by Harper's Bazaar editors)

SILHOUETTES—The new torso is dramatic and corsets make it come true—the full bust, the rounded hips, and the infinitesimally tiny waist. It is a toss-up between cigarette slimness and the hour-glass figure in day dresses and in evening gowns. Modesty is more sensational than nakedness—the completely covered silhouette reveals every atom of the torso.

FABRICS—Fabrics are sumptuous both day and night. There is glamour in stiff satins, velvets, and taffetas, and the richness of lames and brocades. Plaids flourish by day in short box-coats over plain colored dresses and at night in coats of wool, velvet, or brocade.

SPANISH—The Spanish wave sweeps in with bullfighter snoods, with Infanta headdresses, with flashes of Goya red against dead black, with matador hats, with soutache braid everywhere.

DRESSES—The afternoon dress returns simple as a school girl's, dramatically severe in line, marvelously rich in material. Skirt themes are important—the bustles that accent the skirt in back, the huge bows placed low in front, the polonaise draping at the sides, and the feeling of movement always.

PERIOD INFLUENCES—This is a year for romantics—for poetic Victorian taffetas with touches of white lace at the wrist and neckline, for stiff velvets enormously full like a Velasquez painting, for slim flowing brocades with tiny Edwardian waists, and for Sargeant portrait gowns. There are Victorian revivals in muffs, in bonnets, in pelerines, in bustles, in sequins, and in ostrich feathers.

ACCENTS—Pile wide bibs of jewels at the neckline of plain black dresses. Show your leopard spots in coats, in hats, in muffs, in capes, in shoes, and even in umbrella handles. Embroideries are used, furs are encrusted with paillettes, and wide ribbons are tied under the chin of romantic little bonnets. In color, watch for the splash of vermillion on dead black, for the new dark blue called winter blue, and for the color of tangerines in blouses.

★ FASHION PREVIEW ★

BACK-SWISH takes the play and catches the eye in this bright dress of blue and rose candy-striped Celanese rayon moire, drawn tightly to the rear and tied there by a bowknot, as featured in Harper's Bazaar for September.

While this haircut does not rank in historical importance with that Delilah gave Samson, it is nevertheless noteworthy because it brought two people into police court, cost them $25 each. Vernon Swan left a Milwaukee barber shop proud of the artistic job that had been done on his hair, wended to a near-by tavern to submit the trim to critical inspection of his friends. Oscar Meyer took full cognizance of the haircut, deliberated thoughtfully, gave this verdict: "Lousy." There was bedlam in the barroom which ended with both men in court and Swan with three artistic stitches embroidered in his newly shorn scalp.

It sounded like a new kind of golf they were playing on a considerably overpopulated course at Akron, Ohio. Sheriff Walter P. O'Neil, who happened by with five deputies, listened for the traditional word "fore." Instead he heard what sounded very much like "bingo." He investigated, found 6000 people gathered in a tent which was being mobbed like a nineteenth hole, stymied two $25 pots just as they were being handed out, arrests for gambling.

Contrary to popular opinion, holding the breath does not prevent a bee's stinger from puncturing one's skin.

It is not always possible to correct faulty sight by fitting of glasses. Eye ailments do not always arise from factors within the eye itself.

She Tries Hard ... But in Vain!

She tried to take care of her own hair, but it ended as so many cases have . . . a complete failure. Her hair does not have the luster that it should, it is lacking that appealing loveliness. Her hair is badly damaged, the ends are dry, it has been overbleached, and harmful chemicals have been used. Occasional visits to different shops, that take no personal interest in the patron, undoubtedly hindered instead of helped.

No Effort and Beautiful Hair

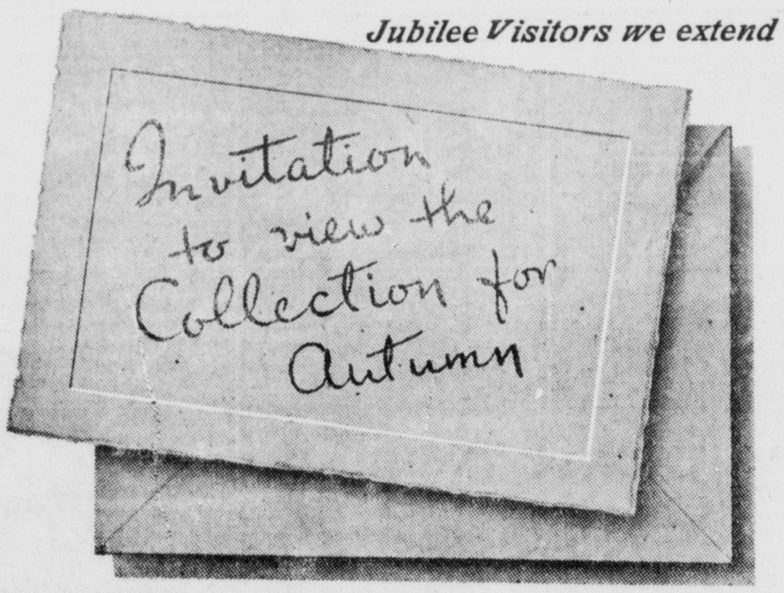

Now she is getting the full luster and charm that she deserves. She has regular appointments with The Tiny Beauty Salon, her hair is kept in wonderful condition. She now has that appealing loveliness in her hair that she had been lacking. Whether it be dinner, golf, riding, dancing, or tennis her hair is always in condition. We make a study of her hair and its problems. Visit The Tiny Beauty Salon soon and notice the difference.

Costs have been kept down in this home with the result that a popular model has been produced considerably below the $5,000 mark. The plan of this home follows a familiar pattern but not its costs. The Federal Housing Administration insured its mortgage of $3,300 after FHA officials had assigned the home a valuation of $4,250. The mortgage will be amortized over a period of twenty years during which time the monthly payments will amount to only $22.44, exclusive of taxes and hazard insurance. This home was built in Iowa.

How a British Diver Learned Secrets of Destroyed U-Boats

By Robert Randolph
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

One possible explanation of the recent successes of German submarines and the fact that relatively few of them have been reported destroyed is the report that the U-boats are able to muffle their engines so that the sound can't be picked up by the listening devices aboard anti-submarine craft.

During the last few years, the British Navy had reported it was obtaining great success in development and perfection of the crude hydrophones that were used toward the end of the World War for locating nearby submerged U-boats so they could be depth-bombed.

But the torpedoing of the aircraft carrier Courageous, which went have been screened by destroyers that should have picked up the noise of the U-boat's engines, indicates there may be something to the report that Germany has found a way to get around the hazard of listening devices.

U-BOAT SECRETS WELL KEPT

Submarines are closely guarded from prying eyes in times of peace. When battleships, cruisers and destroyers tie up at foreign ports, their officers welcome the visits of the foreign naval officers. But submarine officers are not "at home" to anyone but the men of their own navy and a few trusted civilians.

In the World War, virtually every one of the few German submarine that surrendered at sea was sunk by its crew before the captors could board it. Nevertheless, it was not long before the British Naval Intelligence Department Naval Intelligence Department began to show an amazingly accurate knowledge of the latest developments in U-boats, the movements of German warships, their signal codes and even the location of freshly-laid mine fields.

Not until several years after the war did it become generally known how the Admiralty obtained this information. The best diver in the navy had been picked to specialize in entering and searching U-boats as soon as possible after they were sunk in accessible waters. This man was E. C. Miller, and he may even be engaged in the same task now, since he was still in the British Navy a few years ago. During the World War he entered more than 60 sunken submarines for which he was decorated by the King in Buckingham Palace.

A BOAT PEOPLED BY THE DEAD

It was not until the second year of the World War that the Admiralty conceived the idea of sending a diver down to inspect a sunken submarine and find out what new gadgets and devices were in it. The boat was one sunk off the Kentish coast. Miller descended and squeezed through a jagged shell hole. His electric lamp disclosed a macabre scene. Salt water eels, some several feet long, and other inhabitants of the deep were feeding on the bodies of the crew. Attracted by the motion of the water as he moved through it, the bodies crowded about Miller, arms swinging about Miller, arms swing and eyes staring. He tied them to pipes, wheels and stanchions and went on with his checking. By accident he found the captain's strongbox.

Miller's commanding officer opened it and found three naval codes and a chart of a recently-laid mine field. This information was regarded as far more important than was Miller's report on the innovation he found in the U-boat. It gave the Admiralty the idea of organizing a special flying unit to rush Miller and his apparatus to any point off the British coast where a submarine was bagged.

If any U-boats have been sunk in accessible waters during the present war, it is certain that the British Admiralty has had its underwater intelligence men—possibly Miller himself—on the scene. The enemy's tomb will always yield something of value in the way of code books, gadgets, maps and papers in the clothing of dead officers.

FLOYD GIBBONS' BODY BACK TO WASHINGTON FOR FUNERAL RITES

Stroudsburg, Pa., Sept. 26.—Floyd Gibbons, whose travels as a war correspondent took him to the far corner of the globe, started on his last journey today—a trip in death to Washington, his former home.

The 52-year-old reporter with the white eye patch was planning to go abroad to cover the European War when heart disease killed him Sunday night at his farm near here.

Gibbons' brother, Edward T. of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Theodore Mayer, of Newton Centre, Mass., arrived yesterday to accompany the body to Washington. Funeral services will be at Dahlgren Temple, Georgetown University, 10 a. m., tomorrow and burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

ONE OF A SERIES OF ADVERTISEMENTS ON MEN WHO MAKE MISSOURI

"Yep-Bill And 2100 Other Druggists Helped Make Missouri!"

A FINE citizen—Bill or Bob or Ben—the Druggist in your community. He is representative of more than 2100 retail druggists in Missouri.

Bill's job doesn't end with supplying your needs for cigarettes, soft drinks and a thousand and one other items 16 to 24 hours a day. As a prescription pharmacist he stands as a safeguard to the health of your family and community. Dependent upon his knowledge, accuracy and skill, life or death frequently is in the balance.

Under the sign of the mortar and pestle, the druggists of Missouri have pioneered in the development of our state since the days of Daniel Boone. In those days he was known as the village apothecary, whose shop was distinguished by the once familiar vials of colored water. The druggist shares honors with the doctor in preserving the health of the community through intelligent, untiring and efficient service. He has always been a foremost citizen.

Today—with the constant advance of the medical profession—the druggists' responsibilities and duties have been greatly increased. He fills a position of added confidence and importance in the community—as a man to whom the public looks constantly for advice and competent attention to their needs. His watchword is "service."

We—your electric, gas and water companies of Missouri—are proud to have so much in common with your druggist. You are accustomed to drop in to his store or to call him at almost any hour, and you have learned to take it for granted that he will be there on the job at your service.

That is our objective, too. Twenty-four hours every day, year in and year out, we see to it that you can press an electric switch, turn a gas valve or a water faucet and find us on the job. We like, too, our kinship with your druggist as a local citizen. He is a part of your community, he is a public servant, he is a taxpayer. And so, too, your public utility companies help share the taxes of city, county, state and nation, help in every worth while community activity and help make every Missouri town a better place to live.

So, your druggist and his local fellow merchants and your utility companies have joined hands in making life safer and more pleasant.

UNUSUAL FACTS REVEALED

—by "Movie Spotlight"

BREWERS ACCUSED OF FRAUD IN MISSOURI

Jefferson City, September 25.—State Liquor Supervior Walker Pierce acted today to curb what he termed "a fraud on the public" by some brewers doing business in Missouri.

Pierce said his inspectors had discovered that some beer being shipped into the state bearing the 5 per cent labels in reality had an alcoholic content of less than 3.2 per cent.

A letter to all brewers licensed in Missouri warned that samples of beer suspected of being less than 3.2 per cent by weight would be analyzed and if the department's suspicions were borne out the brewer would be cited to show cause why his license should not be revoked.

Pierce also warned wholesalers that sales of liquor in large quantities to persons holding beer licenses would not longer be tolerated.

A new regulation effective October 15 will permit beer and liquor sales in any quantity provided it is not for resale. Dealers will be required to report all such sales over five gallons to the supervisor and to keep a record of all such sales for two years.

LAMAR CITIZENS PROTEST CLARK'S ARM STAND

Lamar, Mo., Sept. 25.—Fred D. Hays, a Lamar war veteran, circulated a petition denouncing Senator Bennett Clark's stand on the neutrality bill. The petition was presented and read to 240 persons.

Two hundred and thirty-two promptly signed it. Eight refused. The signers included a majority of the business and professional men of Lamar, county officers and citizens of all classes.

Many women signed the petition, which was a copy of a telegram sent tonight to Clark. The message read:

Senator Bennett Clark, Washington, D. C.:

It is not interest in either France or England that prompts this message. But we can't forget that if the Allies are overwhelmed, more than a hundred islands on our own coast fall to Germany. These include the Bahamas, the Bermudas, the Windward Islands, the Leeward Islands, Jamaica and Trinidad. Then there is British Guiana, on the South American continent. The possession of these islands would make the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean a German lake, wrest from us the control of the Panama canal and give Hitler a thousand fields from which his bombing planes, practically at the water edge of our southeastern coast, could menace the very existence of this country. How can you believe if Germany wins, we can keep out of a terrible, bloody and perhaps hopeless war? You did all you could in the last session to hamstring and oppose any strengthening in the country's defense. Why not make amends to your country by voting to allow us to use our international rights and furnish much needed supplies to the Allies that might enable them to win and thus preserve this country, without the necessity of its going to war, from coming under the shadow of Hitler's mighty power in case he conquers at present, thus paving the way for a bloody and terrible defensive war upon our own soil, with all of the agony and ruin visited upon millions of our own people?

A "Cub" sportplane is now on the market as a pontoon seaplane. The ship is a deluxe, two passenger plane selling for less than $2000, and is powered with a 65 horsepower motor.

Washington Comment

If anyone had a bomb-throwing or disturbance program worked out for the opening of Congress, the enterprise was nipped in the early bud. It would be putting it mildly to say that the police had the situation well in hand. Admission was by pass, presented at well guarded barriers that were pig-tight, horse-high and bull-strong. The statement of the Declaration of Independence that all men are created equal, was given full force and effect. Those accustomed to occupy the seats of the mighty, got in if they could prove themselves. Otherwise they had to be satisfied with the autumnal beauty of the capitol grounds.

When other means of entrance failed, resort was had to the roof of all evil. Ten dollar bids for passes failed to produce results, and served only to demonstrate that the demand was greater than the supply. Inside, a chair was a luxury. Foreign ministers, diplomats, and persons of domestic prominence, did not consider it beneath their dignity to accept a seat on the gallery stairs. On the floor there was the usual exchange of greetings, the heartiness of which was in no wise impaired by the fact that the legislators had parted company but a few short weeks before.

Despite the preliminary din, and the applause that greeted the arrival of the President, and now and then necessitated a pause in the delivery of his address, the assembly was soberly attentive and serious. It seemed to be realized that grave business lay ahead. The general trend of Mr. Roosevelt's message of course was a foregone conclusion: the replacing of the arms embargo by the cash and carry plan. Beyond that, and as to details, the President would forbid war credits to belligerent nations: war areas should be determined, which commercial American ships may not enter: wide authority to prevent American citizens from entering danger zones and travelling in vessels of belligerent nations is desirable: those who buy munitions of war here must acquire full title to the property before it leaves the dock. The speech occupied a full half-hour.

Democratic members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee who are backing the policy of the Administration, assembled to determine how the desires of the White House can be put into operation most advantageously. Opponents of the cash and carry were quite as active. More than a score of them met in the office of Senator Johnson to sketch out a campaign. The public naturally was not taken into confidence, but it is known that the oppositionists are determined to fight to the last ditch.

Assassinations for political reasons have been rare in the United States. Few men in public life have been hated more sincerely by some of their enemies than Mr. Bryan on the Democratic side, and Mr. Hoover on the Republican: but Mr. Bryan and many others who were made the target of a bitter dislike went to the tomb by the orderly processes of nature. The killing of Lincoln was hardly more than the result of a brain storm. The slayers of Garfield and McKinley, though tried and found sound of mind, probably would have been lodged in asylums for the criminal insane, had the victims been of less consequence and service to the land at large. Premier Calinescu of Rumania came to his end through a typical political assassination, alleged by the murderers to be the work of an elaborately constructed organization and probably so in fact. Speaking of organization, the dead Premier's government made a good showing: nine participants in the crime were executed according to law and before midnight, for a killing that took place after lunch hour of the same day.

There is plenty of good advice to the effect that we should not get involved in a European war. One might go further and remark that we ought not to become involved in too elaborate a consideration of it. Up to the time that the first German soldier stepped over into Poland, the papers gave us to understand that solving our own problems was a taxing job. Surely, the war over there cannot have wiped out all our difficulties at home.

An Apple a Day Does Keep Doctor Away

THERE'S more to the adage, "An Apple a Day Keeps the Doctor Away," than is generally believed. Any normal child should keep healthy the year round if he receives his daily quota of fruits and vegetables, the "protective foods," writes Dr. Walter H. Eddy, director of Good Housekeeping Bureau, in the October issue.

It is an established fact that both fruits and vegetables contain the important vitamin C, which gives the greatest resistance to scurvy. But returning to the apple, it may not be well known that it thwarts the development of hostile bacteria in the intestinal tract and combats diarrheal diseases and constipation, says Dr. Eddy. In addition, the apple supplies part of the basic minerals which the body requires daily.

Dr. Eddy has drawn up the following chart which shows the amount of fruits and vegetables required weekly to protect a child's health.

	Tomatoes and Citrus Fruits	Green Leafy and Yellow Vegetables	Dried Fruits	Other Vegetables and Fruits
Child under 4 yr.	1.5 lbs	1.5 lb.	3 lb.	1 lb.
Boy 4-6; girl 4-7	1.5	1.5	4	1
Boy 7-8; girl 8-10	1.5	2.0	6	2
Boy 9-10; girl 11-14	1.75	2.0	8	2
Boy 11-12; girl over 12	1.75	2.0	8	2
Active boy 13-15	2.0	2.0	12	2

FUMIGATE STORED GRAINS

Weevils are working on stored wheat, peas, barley, and other stored grains; they will continue to work until cool weather unless something is done to stop them.

Treatment with carbon disulfide is not very expensive and will be rather successful if done properly. It should be carried out immediately before cool temperatures set in. Best results will be had when fumigation is carried out while the grain is 70° or higher. The amount to use will depend on the tightness of the bin, but the usual dosage requires ten to twelve pounds of the chemical for each 1000 cubic feet of bin space. The material is somewhat dangerous to use and one should keep all persons, animals, and fire away from the building when treatment is being carried on. The grain should be exposed to the chemical for 36 to 48 hours, after which the building should be aired thoroughly by opening all doors and windows for a few hours. The fumigant may be poured directly on the grain or exposed in shallow pans. Milling qualities of the grain nor germination will not be affected if the treatment is carride out properly. U. S. D. A. Bulletins dealing with corn and wheat torage under the Ever Normal Grainary Plan have brief discussions of this subject.

Of the 2000 known kinds of bacteria and germs, only about 100 are thought to be harmful to mankind. The other 1900 varieties are necessary to life in one way or another.

A "Cub" sportplane is now on the market as a pontoon seaplane. The ship is a de luxe, two passenger plane selling for less than $2000, and is power with a 65 horsepower motor.
